THE TIME is at hand when quar rels take place in regard to the roaming of hens. Spring flowers are showing through the ground in many places already and a flock of hens can soon do a good deal of damage with a tutip bed on which considerable time and money has been spent. Later on the family gardens will be calling for tender care, and here again the hens can maké endless trouble. Just a lit tle thought for others in these mut ters and there need be no trouble or unpleasantness. The law is for those who fail to have this thought and consideration for others, and owners of bens are responsible for any damage that may be done by their feathered pets.
