CANADIAN ROCKIES RESORT KEEPS OPEN HOUSE ALL YEAR

Banff, the Beautiful, is rapidly becoming an all-the-year-round resort. The summer months during which its palatial hotels are open, will always be the leading season, with Winter Carnival weeks as second, but the balance of the year sees an ever-increasing number of travelers detouring at the picturesque log station that blocks the town's clean, wide Main street.
 Autumn among the mountains that encircle Banff, is a season of pure joy. There is a tang in the air and the hoary giants wear their cloaks of mist more frequently, but the crisp coolness invites to more strenuous exercise in the open. When the snow falls, a trip to Lake Louise on skis or snowshoes permits a tete-a-tete with the Pearl of the Rockies. Swiss guides are available if climbing is desired.

With the departure of the throngs of summer guests, the wild game which is protected in Rocky Mt. Park in which Banff is located, becomes more venturesome and it is a common sight to see deer grazing along Main street.
 The Government swimming pools are open all winter and late visitors enjoy the novel experience of splashing in open-air, glass-enclosed pools of warm water from Nature's own hot kettle, while on-lookers are wrapped in furs.
 There is always plenty of hotel accommodation at Banff and travelers will find a between-seasons stop at Banff a pleasant interlude on trans-continental journeys. This is particularly true during Winter Carnival days when merriment and beautiful sport fill every waking hour.
