TO THE OLD HOME CLOCK

Old "Tee-Dee-Dee," I see your dust, Shrouded through the mists that cloud my days. Since that enchanted long lost while I moved your hands with harm less zeal.

Grown up to ways I fear mistle, I would abjure their doubtful lure. To feel again that downy bed Where you romanced above my head.

Friend of my youth, how well I know Your mellow stroke no slumber brings. When up the stairs your chimneys would go, Or echo in the hall below.

Unlike this tin affair that screams Its shrill alarm, you spoke with charm— A trait that now my heart esteems The more my sleep is robbed of dreams.

And then with you, no day forgot My right to eat until replete, I turned from dinners always hot Where mother dear prepared the pot.

Now, when my morning work is done And whistles roar—"One hour, no more!" I gorge a sandwich as I run, Or "forget" my clock exist on none.

Now, when my morning work is done And whistles roar—"One hour, no more!" I gorge a sandwich as I run, Or "forget" my clock exist on none.
