Quebec, the Old World Province.

1. The Dalhousie, a species of conveyance much resorted to by visitors to Quebec. 2. An old Quebec scene, the like of which was used in France four centuries ago. 3. Chateau Frontenac, Quebec's history as the castle from a glorious height looks down on old Quebec and on the early battle field. 4. The lighthouse, captured by the British at Quebec Hill, rests near the Quebec Citadel by the side of a battery which fell to the Canadians in the Great War. 5. Though their farms are modern, some farmers still use the ox as beast of burden in the back country.

THESE are just a few pictures taken in Quebec. It is not without reason that this province is becoming the tourist resort of the continent, for here is a country of utmost fascination and intrigue. Quebec has an atmosphere all its own and, if it can be said, more of an old-world atmosphere than has the old-world of today. Quebec is the eighteenth century keeping pace with the twentieth, yet retaining its identity. One stops at little wayside shrines. The wooden cross, the patron saint in effigy, the nurseries flowers, the wigwag at her distaff, the white-walled houses close at hand transport you to the distant land from whence the little bodies of cedar fence the farmer gathers in his crop with up-to-date machinery, and stores it in a modern barn. Behind, the hum of the telegraph wire reminds you that you are not living in a by-gone day and, if that is not enough, through the not too distant fields, a huge train thunders. Near the white walls the lady of the house draws water from the old-fashioned well, and bakes her bread in an old brick oven, the like of which was used by her ancestors in France four centuries ago. She spins her own wool and shares with her husband a faith, which brings the old-fashioned, is almost as old as the Christian era. A kindly hospitable soul is she, nor is she always backward in learning, for she probably attended the convent of the Ursulines at Quebec, or in the convent at Louisbourg. And her husband—He may be content to wear the bonnet, to sit around the fire, or on the threshold at night, to smoke his "Bouge Quebec" and to drive five miles to church early on all holidays in his buggy or in the straw lined cart that is used about the farm, but he "knows his letter" and better still, he knows how to farm. The Quebec farm is usually up-to-date. You get all that can be got from the soil, and if you sit with him and talk you will see that he gets the

SURPRISED AT RESULTS IN SUCH SHORT TIME

"Wonder what an idle Telephone thinks about?" I STAND here idle for hours at a time! Ho-hum! She forgets that she hires me to help her. "She complains of never having time enough, yet I've watched her for over an hour trying to write one letter to Springfield. "For a few cents I'd put her in Springfield, and for 5 minutes the music of her voice would make somebody happy. "When she picks up a pen she gets so self-conscious that her letters—well, honest, they don't do her justice. "No pen helps a woman to express her real self, at her best, as I do—no postage stamp travels so fast. "I sometimes think her husband appreciates her more. Ho-hum!"

Another striking victory for Dreo, the famous bowel remedy. The bottle effects marked improvement in condition of Mrs. Wm. Bonasey.

Mr. William Bonasey, of Aldershot P. Q., Hamilton, Ont., was greatly surprised at the condition of his wife, who had suffered for years with stomach, kidney and liver ailments. These organs simply would not do their work properly, resulting in many distressing and weakening symptoms. Now, thanks to the corrective influence of Dreo, is typified in the case of Mrs. Bonasey.

"For years my wife has suffered from stomach, kidney and liver trouble," declares Mr. Bonasey. "She was very constipated, and had rheumatism in joints and muscles. She lost her appetite and found it impossible to get a good night's sleep. Everything she ate would sour in her stomach, causing her to have pain across her back from her kidneys, hot joints and rheumatism. She had a yellow complexion and at times would get dizzy spells. "She tried almost everything, but nothing seemed to help and she continually became weaker, until she heard about Dreo and decided to try it. She has only used one bottle, but we are surprised how different she looks. It is doing wonders of good for her and she is much stronger." "When the digestive system gets out of order, it means that food values are not properly retained and distributed to nourish the organs, nor is waste matter cast off. Such a condition rapidly undermines the strongest constitution. Let the corrective properties of Dreo, compounded from Nature's own medicinal herbs and roots, restore the proper functions. The end of a rigorous winter finds thousands in need of a tonic and restorative. This need is met perfectly by Dreo. Dreo contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs."

Dreo is being specially introduced in Georgetown by W. R. Watson, and is sold by a good druggist everywhere.
