

A PSALM OF BUSINESS LIFE

Do not say in mournful numbers Advertising is in vain: For he courts defeat who slumbers When he might such help obtain. Business life is stern and earnest And its word to each implies: "Dust thou art, to dust returnest. If thou wilt not advertise, Though stagnation, gloom and sorrow May at times obscure the way Prospects may be made to-morrow Brighter than they are to-day. People pass while time is fleeting, And we must, to make them think, Keep the drums of business beat. By the use of printer's ink. In the world's broad field of battle Large success before us lies, If we cause the wheels to rattle By the way we advertise. That which easily seems and pleases -ant Must not smother before us spread We must fill with life the present, Least we should be counted dead. All successful men remind us We to heights unknown may rise, If we make the people find us By the way we advertise. Our success may help another Who is out upon the main; We may find in him a brother Ready to take back again. Let us then be up and doing What the passing moments need Still achieving, still pursuing, Learn to constantly succeed. As each wreath of morning vapor Helps to make the Summer skies, So each issue of this paper Helps the men who advertise.

Father peeled off five dollars for the gas bill, three dollars for the telephone, two dollars for the young man's main lessons, twenty dollars for table expenses, etc., and when mother asked him for twenty extra this week to buy things he needed after the housecleaning, he started to sing "When the roll is called up yonder I'll be there."

A Farmer Who Cared His Health for His Son. John is a big, gentle, good natured farmer with a gentle voice and gray eyes that beam out hospitality from behind steel-rimmed spectacles. John wanted his boy to be a doctor, cultivating his rocky acres to save the money, but when the boy was only three weeks old, he was taken with some fainting spells and an enlarged medical attention was required. The doctor said that if the boy had had better care and better medicine he would have had better care and better medicine. He was received at the Muskoka Hospital for Convalescents and after a few weeks of treatment with skilled medical and nursing attendance, the boy's health was restored. John is actually getting ready to go to college. He believes he is well enough now after ten months to go back to the farm. The doctor's advice is to stay on to make sure there will be no relapse. There is a lot of time to be made up on that farm, but he will be able to get away to college. Contributions to aid Muskoka Hospital in its work may be sent to Muskoka Hospital, 221 College Street, Toronto.

Quebec to Repeat Carnival Success

QUEBEC is again to have a real live carnival that shall be truly representative of the wonderful sporting attractions of the ancient Capital. The success of the dog races held in Quebec last year has encouraged the organizers to sponsor a very much bigger program for this year, and a comprehensive series of sporting events will be held on February 21, 22, and 23, in which all the sports for which Quebec is so naturally adapted will be represented, and culminating in a grand masquerade ball at the Chateau Frontenac. In addition to the international races for the Eastern Dog Club Derby Trophy, there will be events in snow-shoeing, skiing, ice racing, curling and skating. The whole of these events will take place within the Exhibition Grounds, and it is proposed to once again give Quebec an ice palace. The people of Quebec take, and naturally, a great pride in their wonderful old city, and the ancient capital is not so large that its people cannot get together on occasion to fetes en masse. A carnival in Quebec is not to be forgotten, for the whole populace absorbs the spirit of the

Nova Scotia Interior as Moose Pasture

Nova Scotia is a country of lakes and streams, offering many ideal canoe trips, and the interior is a great moose pasture. Moose hunting, because both the canoe and automobile are used by hunters and guides, this saving many miles of weary tramping through the wilderness. On the Liverpool chain of lakes reached from South Millford via Annapolis Royal or Digby, and on Lake Kedegashook, Lake Rosebrook, Lake Minto, Lake St. John, and the Liverpool River expert Indian and white guides use the canoe for long distances and speed call the moose to the shore with their birch bark boats. When some distant point is to be reached from "Owl" Peninsula, South Millford camp, canoe, guides, hunters and stags are loaded upon a big motor truck for the journey. Although large numbers of moose are shot each year, many with magnificent "sprags" the autumn huntress is said to equal the kill. Such guides as Louis Hurdow, half-breed, Micmac and Sam Goble, full-blooded Indian, are expert moose callers and stalkers and rarely disappoint the hunter. The cleverness with which they simulate the calls of the cow moose with a simple roll of birch bark fashioned into a horn, is sure to fool the wisest old bull in the wilderness. When the calling season is past, the moose no longer comes to the hunter and the hunter must go to him. Neither canoe, nor automobile figures much in this phase of moose hunting except that one, or both, may help the hunter reach the place where the quarry is supposed to be and carry him home when the hunt is over.

Polsoned Grain (the Cheapest Method) - Preparing the Bait - How to Place It - Bee Colony Winter Supplies - Feeding Facts - A Refrigerator Without Ice. (Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

With the passing of snow each spring, the destructive bark gnawing of small rodents is in evidence in too many orchards. Polsoned Grain (the Cheapest Method). Polson offers the best and cheapest method of preventing mouse injury. Should there be any evidence of mice before frost-sets, or should there be an abundance of feed and shelter for mice in the young orchard through the presence of weeds, seeds, and fallen fruit, it is advisable to institute a mouse-poisoning campaign before snow covers the ground. An excellent poison bait can be prepared as follows: Make a clear starch paste by mixing one tablespoon full of glass starch in one-half cup of cold water and stir this mixture into a pint of boiling water; then mix one ounce of strychnine sulphate with one ounce of baking soda, and stir into the starch until a smooth mass is formed; then stir in one-half cup of heavy corn syrup and a tablespoonful of glycerine. Apply this mixture to 40 pounds of clean wheat and mix thoroughly to coat each kernel. Put the poisoned grain in a strong paper sack, then turn the sack upside down for stirring and seal the vessel, being careful where the wash water goes. Where to Place the Poisoned Grain. The poisoned grain can be placed in containers of some sort such as tin cans, or open-necked bottles, small drain tiles and such like. These containers can then be placed at any likely place where there is protection or near the trunk of the tree. With the poisoned grain in a container so placed as to be protected from rain or standing water, it will always be on duty should a hungry bark-eating mouse appear on a tree. The container with any unused poisoned grain should be taken up and put out of harm's way as soon as the mouse danger is over in the early spring. Put a poison label, large enough for all humans to see, on all poison grain sacks. When the sacks are empty burn them. Keep all poisons out of the reach of children and animals. Stevenson, O. A. C., Guelph.

Success in wintering bees depends upon (1) the strength of the colony, (2) the quantity and quality of winter stores, and (3) the temperature and humidity of the air in the cellar. Every colony must possess an abundance of young bees. If some have failed to rear sufficient bees at the fall they should be united with other colonies of the requisite strength are obtained. It is useless to put away weak colonies in the fall and expect to take out worth while colonies in the spring. Equally important is the quantity and quality of stores. On an average safe side every colony should have 40 pounds of stores, either white honey or sugar syrup. On an average bees wintered on natural honey last twice as heavily as those wintered on sugar syrup. Given strong colonies with good stores, there is yet required to insure perfect wintering a certain amount of ventilation. Usually a cellar under a house is used and if the temperature in it does not fall below 35 degrees F. and above 45 degrees F. and it is neither too damp nor too dry, good results are obtained. Plenty of ventilation is necessary either an excess of moisture or an extreme of dryness. In addition, the part of the cellar reserved for bees must be always dark and must never be subject to jars and such disturbances.

Feeding Facts. Silage is indispensable for cheap milk production. It is a succulent food. The hay should be a legume such as clover or alfalfa. Silage and alfalfa or clover hay are the "best and cheapest" roughages. Feed all the roughage a cow will clean up. Choose grain mixture to balance clean roughage available. Feed grain in accordance to milk yield of each cow. For Holsteins or Ayrshires feed one pound grain for each four pounds milk. For Guernsey or Jerseys feed one pound grain for each three pounds milk. Give access to salt daily. Feed and must require an abundance of pure, fresh water at all times. This Refrigerator Requires No Ice. A refrigerator that will keep food products at a temperature of 55 degrees Fahrenheit can be made easily at home. It consists of an open framework of shelving around which is tacked cotton flannel, burlap, or some similar material, which is kept moist. The evaporation of the moisture holds the temperature down. A series of wicks, or strips of cloth, extending from a pan of water on top of the refrigerator to the covering of the refrigerator, prevent the moisture. Such a refrigerator should be kept in the shade where there is a good current of air. The potato grower who gives thought to labor, seed, and fertilizer is tackling the potato problem in the right way. Seeds, like folks, like a good bed. Prepare it well and make most money.
