CAPTAIN JIMMY'S CHRISTMAS

By FRANCES YALE

CAPTAIN Jimmy Smith lived in a funny little house down on the beach. Once it had been the cabin of his old seaman, Blimpy; but it was the only house Captain Jimmy and his wife Vixen had.

In the summer time he sold fish and clams and lobsters to the summer cottagers, but in the winter he had hard work to keep the little cabin warm and did food for himself and Vixen.

It was the day before Christmas, and the beach was frosty with snow.

"Snow!" said Captain Jimmy, as he left his little house and went up toward the village. His pipe was in his mouth, but he was not smoking—he was out of tobacco.

He smiled sadly because he knew that he would have a lonely Christmas. He had no wife or children, and he was very much alone. The poor age often forgotten.

By the time Captain Jimmy had bought some flour and salt pork and a little coffee it was dark and moving fast. So when he heard the sound of children crying he stopped in surprise.

"Hello!" shouted Captain Jimmy, and the crying stopped at once. In another minute he almost tumbled over two little children who were running along the beach path.

"Leave 'em!" called Captain Jimmy, and he put out a long arm and gathered the little ones close to him.

"What are you doing here?" he shouted for the wind was screaming now.

They tried to explain, but Captain Jimmy couldn't understand a word they said, they cried so much, and at last, half dragging, half carrying them, he hurried them into the warm little cabin where he lived.

When the kerosene lamp was lighted the two children cried piteously and called on Captain Jimmy.

"Are you Thanta Claus?" one asked, and the other little girl, who looked exactly like her, cried and clung to Captain Jimmy's big hand.

"I love you, Mister Thanta Claus," the whistler said.

"How you greet hearts," cried Captain Jimmy, his eyes full of tears. "I guess I'll have to be Santa Claus tonight. I can never get you home tonight in this howling blizzard."

The two little girls smiled brightly and took off their red cheeks and knitted caps and leggings and rubbers.

"We're lost," said one of the twins, and she told a long story of how they had gone to walk with nurse, who had suddenly run away and left them in the woods. "We got lost, but she wouldn't come back," said Little Saddy. "My mamma scolded her this afternoon."

"What are your names? Where do you live?" asked Captain Jimmy, as he pushed them up to the table before two great bowls of bread and milk.

"Howdy! Goodness me, I never heard of any Browns over to the Point! You'll have to stay here till morning!"

"Will Thanta Claus come here?" asked Little.

"He's not here," said Captain Jimmy. "By and by after the twins had said their prayers and were sound asleep on Captain Jimmy's bed while Vixen purred at their feet, Captain Jimmy walked the floor and whistled a tune.

"I reckon that Santa Claus could never get down my little stove pipe," he chuckled. "I'll just have to fill those two little stockings myself!"

Sometime afterward a number of people hurried through the snow and peered into Captain Jimmy's window. What did they see? Why, just Captain Jimmy, with his empty pipe between his teeth, holding two little stockings in his hands.

Suddenly he began to take things off the mantel-piece and put them into the stockings. They were things that he had loved—they were all that he had—bits of coral and pretty shells from far countries, some odd wooden toys he had played with when he was a child and two red apples.

Just as he was putting the last two stockings on the edge of the shelf the door burst open and some people rushed in and began to hug him and question him, and they all talked at once. They proved to be the father and mother and uncles and aunts of the lost twins, and they were so grateful to Captain Jimmy for his kindness that they insisted on taking him home with them to spend Christmas.

And Vixen, the cat, went home, and the stockings which Captain Jimmy had filled.

Mr. Brown engaged Captain Jimmy to be captain of his yacht, and Captain Jimmy, smoked his pipe and said it was his happiest Christmas.

Tourists Help Develop Ontario

1. A Typical Bungalow Camp at Emerald Lake. 2. This from the Nipigon. 3. A Vista of the French River.

MOST of the newer parts of Ontario have received their first impetus toward development through the tourists. In many cases it has been the tourists that have first gone to spy out the land. They have found it good, and by the trade which they brought in, have encouraged settlers to set up their homes with the result that the district has been well started on its way to becoming an organized and productive community.

With the idea of inducing traffic, and by so doing, helping to populate and settle those vast, beautiful and productive lands along the right-of-way in Central and western Ontario, the Canadian Pacific Railway has decided to establish a number of Bungalow Camps, modeled on those which have proved so successful in the Canadian Pacific Rockies during the past three years, and it is expected that in a very short time this part of the country will be as famed for its scenic and sporting possibilities as any other part of the Dominion.

The French River, Nipigon Bay and Lake of the Woods districts are, and have been for many years, well known most favourably known to anglers and hunters, particularly those from the United States and the Western provinces; but owing to lack of adequate housing facilities the traffic has been confined chiefly to the more adventurous spirits who are satisfied to live in tents. It is in these districts that the Bungalow Camps will be available at agreed rates with the cordial co-operation of this department, so that the Company will be able to establish camps in some of the choicest spots of this beautiful and inspiring country.

The Hon. Mr. Bowdler, Minister of Lands and Forests in the Ontario Government, has expressed himself as entirely sympathetic to the extension of the Bungalow Camp idea in Ontario, and any sites that may be selected on Crown Lands will be available at agreed rates with the cordial co-operation of this department, so that the Company will be able to establish camps in some of the choicest spots of this beautiful and inspiring country.

More Hebrideans Canada Bound

Waving farewell to loved ones on the Metagama, the Hebrideans are a home loving race of people not much given to wanderings from their native heaths.

The arrival at St. John aboard the Canadian Pacific steamship Marloch and Matarama of over six hundred sturdy men and women of the western Isles, forced by necessity to seek their fortunes in life-land of promise is not without precedent. In the year 1803 a contingent of 111 was brought from the Isle of Mull by Lord Selkirk to develop the sheep industry on St. Clair Plains, Kent County. If there were hard when these people left home, fate was not more kind to them after they had settled here. Forty-five of their number were carried off by fever in the first year and the war of 1812 wiped out the settlement.

In 1812 Lord Selkirk's agent, Colin Robinson, of the Isle of Lewis, persuaded a number of his fellow islanders to whom the abolition of the Clan system had brought high rents and misery, to settle in the Red River district. The party encountered the hostilities of the Indians and, through their industry and perseverance, the jealousy of the white traders, the hostile settlement was wiped out on one occasion, and many of them were in sufficient funds and not a few families aboard the Mont-Blanc were possessed of over £1,000. Some have stopped in Ontario but the larger proportion of them have gone to Red Deer, Alberta, where they will form a small colony.

Life will not be a bed of roses for those who have newly arrived and they will have to work and hard; but this they can do. They are the descendants of the "lords of the Isles" who by strength of arms repulsed the invasions of the Scandinavians and Scots. Social and industrial development was retarded to a great extent by the clan system, but those who have adopted "Canada laws" who by strength of arms repulsed the invasions of the Scandinavians and Scots.
