Can you show me the way to Rest Town? It is thither I am longing to go, For I have grown weary, so weary Of bearing- this burdensome .lond, And the day drags along oh so slowly, And long, oh so long is the road. Oh show me where lies that fair Where work and where labor may

Where I may drop all my burdens And dwell in an infinite peace. But he knew pot the road to Rest But the highway he well knew

And the journey to sorrow had Aye, over and over again. But I came to a pathway diverg-

And gladly my borden laid down Where a sign post with hand dimly pointing Showed the pilgrim the way to Rest Town Then I came to a low lying valley

With the sun sinking low in To a shadowy castle whose portals Proplaimed it the mansion of rest

And I said, 'tis the place I have sought for And forever I here will abide, Where toil never more will op-

Nor care walk along by my side: Here men eat with bands that were folded Nor spoke they through all the day long,

And women sat listless and idle With voices that rose not in song. Here nothing was ever created And nothing was ever begun, And nothing was ever attempted From rising till setting of sun;

The streets of that city were silent Not a sound of a bammer, was The winds even sank to a whisper 'Till scarcely a leaflet was stirred.

But I fled from that ghost baonted mansion And I took up my burden again, Thanking God for the toil He has preparation that can be used as a 66 T COULD just sit right down and cry!" Mrs. Stephens was disappointed - bitterly disappointed - for her home, the spot in which she took such pride; the home she had tried to make so cheerful and pretty, stood before her -like beggar's rags.

It was the same old story-"Cheap Paint"! There it wasthe surface, that should have reflected the joy and cheer she had anticipated, was scaling, cracking, and unkempt. A total loss-and more, a disappointment.

We found that she had used 61/2 gallons of a so-called cheap paint, for which she had paid $26.00. Had she bought Lowe Brothers "High Standard" Paint she would have required only 4 gallons. It would have cost her $23.00. She would have saved $3,00 on the job, and would not then have been on the verge of tears.
