RIPENING CHEDDAR

Results of Nsic Tests at the Agricultural College

Percentage of Shrinkage Under the Various Trials—Cheddar often kept too long in curing-room—Sweet Cheese Milk with Make Good Cheese—Winter Lard, Butterfat.

The Dairy Department of the Ontario Agricultural College made nsic tests during the summer of 1923 in cheddar cheese curing. Four and a half cheeses were used each week.

One was placed in the curing-room directly from the press and allowed to remain there for one week, when it was removed to cold storage; one was put in cold storage at once from the press and allowed to remain there; one was put in the curing-room for the first two days, then paraffined and moved to cold storage; and one was allowed to remain in the curing-room until the ripening period. The chief objects of the experiment were to note differences in the loss of weight, and the effect upon quality of the cheese treated by these four methods. All the cheeses were weighed when taken from the curing-room at the end of one month. The cheese were scored when about six weeks old, and again about two months later.

Percentage of shrinkage under the curing-room for one week, then moved to cold storage. Those paraffined and then moved to cold storage stand next; and the cold storage lots third. The greatest loss was in the lots in cold storage at the end of one month. The average percentage of shrinkage were 1.38, 2.41, 2.86 and 4.42 respectively for the four lots. There was little difference in the average score of the cheese for the three lots in cold storage. Those placed in the curing-room for one week and then moved to a temperature of 40° F. scored highest; then the lots placed in cold storage at once; and next the lots paraffined and put in cold storage. The lots placed in cold storage at once scored lowest. Unfortunately, the cheese of Ontario is ripened in an ordinary curing-room for too long a period.—Dept. of Extension, O. A. College, Guelph.

SWEET CLOVER MILK

Interesting Experiments in Feeding Dairy Cows at the College—Milk From Feeding Sweet Clover. Makes Satisfactory Cheese.

Investigations have been carried on by the Dairy Department of the Ontario Agricultural College during the summer of 1922 and 1923 on the question of using milk produced by cows pasturing on sweet clover for cheese making. About half of the pasture lots used for the purpose of the department of the College use sweet clover as a pasture crop, and the other half do not. The milk from each set of pastures was made up separately on five dates during June and July. The sweet clover lots of milk averaged 2.510 pounds and 4.00 F. respectively. The average percentage of fat were 3.2 and 3.38, respectively. There was practically no difference in the acidity of the milk of both lots at the time of adding the rennet or when dipped. The losses of fat in the whey averaged .182 and .21 per cent, respectively. Proportion of Cheese to Milk.

The average yield of cheese per 100 pounds milk was 91.23 pounds for the sweet clover lots and 90.15 for the non-clover lots. The percentage of moisture in the green ripe cheese was 42.65 and 42.75 for the non-clover cheese. There was nothing abnormal about the sweet clover milk. A study of the results are similar to those obtained during 1922. These two years' tests indicate that there is apparently no reason why cows fed or pastured on sweet clover should not produce satisfactory milk for the making of good cheese.—Dept. of Extension, O. A. College, Guelph.

Protect the Lawn in Winter.

A well-kept path made across the lawn in winter will probably be permanent damage. The grass may be killed and the soil so compacted that grass seed sown there next season will not thrive. Such a path will generally be obvious for a number of years. A "cow path" is distinctly a winter defect on a lawn. The lawn sign of summer, "Keep off the Paths that are Making" may well be heeded throughout the year.

Another ailment a lawn is to suffer from for the purpose of making a skating rink. A heavy weight of snow in winter is almost certain to completely kill the grass. The grass will not die, but it will be covered with a covering which precludes movement of air.

Young lawns should have a covering of snow. A winter crop of snow blown free of snow in winter, is likely to lose much of its young cover. Break snow about once a week to deflect the wind and holds the snow.

Select the best fall use before you are ready to use him. Get him acclimated to your surroundings and method of feeding and care. Never use a young bear until he has spent ten months of age if you want large young cubs.

"A lion in the coop is worth two in the tree."
