Facts About Optometry

By Dr. C. C. Floyd, Ophthalmologist, Georgetown. Phone 276

NO. 7 OF THE SERIES
 Speaking of the economic value of Optometry, if the Optometrist can at the expense of a few dollars equip a patient with a pair of glasses which will increase that person's value to his employer or to the public or to himself, the Optometrist has rendered a service in value out of all proportion to its cost.
 And as errors of vision are almost universal, and as the Optometrist is able to correct them in the majority of cases, it will be seen that this profession is an important factor, or can be made an important factor, in the progress of the country.
 (To be continued next Wednesday)
