The average worker in industry in Ontario has an ordinary chance of working for ten years with one accident that is sufficiently serious to warrant it being reported to the Workmen's Compensation Board. In normal times there are nearly 400,000 employees under Compensation in this province and in the past eleven years there have been 202,011 accidents reported, indicating an average of eight to ten deaths per day in that period. One very encouraging feature of the reports of the Workmen's Compensation Board covering the year 1925 is that the death cases in that year showed a decrease of 34.7 per cent from 1924, there having been 402 death cases in 1924 and 265 in 1925.
A further decrease in serious accidents, including death cases, is something for which every employer and employee in industry in Ontario can conscientiously work with mutual satisfaction and benefit.
Don't complain about the new baby crying. Suppose all your teeth were out, you had no hair and your legs so weak you couldn't stand upon them. You'd probably howl, too.
