March Rod and Gun

A handsome special section containing the winning photographs of the amateur photo contest recently conducted by Rod and Gun is an interesting feature of the March issue of this magazine which has been just published. The month's stories include a very live article-by George H. Charls who recites an entertaining parrative of A Tenderfoot Hunt in the Wilds of British Columbia, as well as other hunting and fishing parrative. The regular monthly features are good and Raymond Thompson continues his series In the Big Woods of Ganada with the Fox Family, while A. Bryan Williams bas another good chapter of the series Breezes from the West. Bonnycastle Dale deals with Camera Hunting on the Great Barrens of Nova Scotia. Rod and Gun is published monthly by W J. Taylor Limited, Woodstock, Ont.

Legends of the St. Lawrence River in Quebec

Folk tales and legends still cling to the shores of the St. Lawrence, that first highway into the unknown continent of North America. Legends in which are mingled bits of Indian superstition, French customs and religious beliefs. In the time of the early explorers, those brave men who dreamed dreams which led them on and over the bright waters, past dark islands, purple hills and shining cliffs, until they settled in Canada, these legends were reverenced. Now, however, while large Canadian Pacific stanmships crowded with tourists pry up and down the St. Lawrence, the legends are no longer regarded except as quaint fairy tales with somewhat of a religious flavour not to be disregarded or ridiculed, but to be enjoyed as reminiscent of the olden days when saints and demons assumed mortal forms. Katherine Hale, in an artistic little book issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway recently, ably depicts many of these stories. One of the most familiar of these French Canadian werewell or the Irish banahee. Loup-only a bloody wound can restore you legends is that of Loup-Garou; Garou typifies the French Canadian's Loup-Garou is one of many surevidently derived from the German reverence for things spiritual and his legends.

joer at church collections and failed to try to convert his lived man merely because he was such a good partner at checkers. On Christmas night they piayed, instead of going to church. They even, in a mood of defiance, set the mill going, as if it were an ordinary night. Suddenly crack! and the mill stopped working. Then the lantern went out, and the two men were lett in trembling darkness! After that the hired man tumbled down stairs, and the miller began to drink fast and furiously! Presently he heard a deep moaning, and turned to see a huge dog about to attack him. Then the miller knew it was Loup-Garou, and he fell on his know praying for forgiveness. But he lunged at the dog with a resping book, and wounded him. That was the saving of the hired man, for according to the legend, if you have been turned into the form of a wolf or dog because of evil deeds.
