May None of Your Worries be Financial

A MAN in the prime of life must take things as they are.

A young man, starting life need not. He has the advantage of time in his favor—the ability, in large measure, to shape conditions to his own requirements.

There is no dodging contingencies. Contingencies present themselves in every man's life, but contingencies impose no hardships on those who are prepared to meet them.

It requires such a small sum each year to provide financial bulwarks for a home by means of life insurance—funds to provide for every contingency—that no young couple who are establishing a home to play need have any cause for financial worries if they but make proper provision beforehand.

It is always a pleasure to explain the advantages of life insurance to anyone wishing the information.
