GETTING UP

When the clock begins to tingle
Then your nerves begin to jingle
For it means that you must start another
And although your feeling blue
There is nothing else to do
But to jump into some clothes and get away
If the sun is shining brightly
It is not quite so bad;
But if the sky is murky overhead
Oh! the feeling that comes at you,
When you hear that old alarm,
For another hour's sleep you'd give Your head.
But what's the use of wishing
When duty bids you come To the building where you draw your weekly pay
So if you insist on slumber
There are lots who would be glad To have your job, if only for a day.
So jump up and smile
And you'll find that its worth while,
There'll be lots of life when you can beat the bed;
For remember there's a day
When Father Time says stay—
Then know that you will think of what I've said.
