the latter took them around town in the time available and showed them at the work of the time the agints, then entertained them at the work of the work of the Wellington Cafe for supper. This function took some time, for they found ground on which to talk mutually, and it was a real get-together.

Rev. I. W. Pierce and Mr. A. Alexander were in charge of the party, and responsible for the training of the lade and the program given in Brampton. The young visitors must be congratulated on the precision and promptness with which they ran off the different numbers. These consisted of choruses, sung in English and in their native tongue, folk dances, and some athletics, in the form of pyramid building.

Wonderful voices have these boys from a foreign land, robust, sweet and ringing, and especially fine-in the higher registers. They sing English songs, however, with the same rhythm as that which marks their native songs, and the effect is peculiar and attractive. Their National Arther MELTON DEANERY songs, and the effect is peculiar and attractive. Their National Anthem, which preceded their singing of our own National Anthem, is melodious and rhythmic to a degree.

Their fine, sturdy bodies carry them with ease and lightness through the post of rural dean for the second frills and dances, which they do with a light, illting manner that is certain proof of health and vigor. The flag drill was a happy combination of quick and slow movements, and displays how keen are their ears for musical phrases and time.

Nothing appealed to the audience like the special flag number in which one of the boys gave the apostrophe to the flag, and a small bugler sounded the the salute, the remainder of the boys standing at attention. When the boys standing at attention death the thought of what the boys standing at attention of in the audience was ashamed to choke a little at the thought of what the Union Jack means to these lads.
