ENLARGEMENT OF THE CHATEAU LAURIER HOTEL

The illustration has been prepared from the architect's drawings showing the appearance of the Chateau Laurier at Ottawa when the new wing will have been added. The structural addition to the hotel will provide for another 200 rooms, making a total of 500 rooms available for guests. With the changes, banquet hall and ballroom space and other public rooms will be provided on proper scale, thus enhancing the usefulness of this fine unit of the Canadian National Railway's hotel system.

Walk It Off

When the curves of earth oppress you,
When the hills of life distress you,
When the future's grave and gloom,
When the past has lost its power,
Walk it off.
That the sport that legs were made for,
That the purpose roads were laid
For or ill, in debt or paid for,
Walk it off.

The Power of the Purse

By MORRIS SCHULTZ

In the old days men fought to the death for women—but let us face the fact, in the animal world two males engage with talon or horn, the female standing or perching by, until she has vanquished the dust, when she goes calmly to the victor, as if she understood this law of nature, which is the reason why he looks tenderly on Mrs. Harrison's strivings. He was a banker, his wealth was enormous, and his influence greater still. He did not believe in love—his wife was romantic. He had married her for her beauty, his charm, her family. He had been reasonably satisfied with the bargain. Anna Harrison was not.

They lived happily in their great mansion, surrounded by a retinue of servants, and there came Anna Harrison's friends—eccentric painters, authors, sculptors. John Ryan was the first, a young man just rising into fame. One day Harrison saw his wife's hand to his lips, months later Ryan disappeared. "John Ryan? Oh, he's gone West, poor fellow," said Anna in response to his inquiries. "His dealer cancelled the promise of an exhibition, and then that picture had worked so hard on and was to get $4,000 for—well, Mr. Sheehan just went back on his agreement. I'm afraid we won't see poor Mr. Ryan again; he's gone to California to raise grapes."

Local Elders was the author of that famous book "Craps of Hellfire," which he tried unsuccessfully to suppress. He was a celebrity. He was one of Anna Harrison's proteges. Inclined to be foolish, perhaps—it was silly of him to insist on a kiss on the back of his hostess's neck and especially to do so within view of Harrison himself.

A week later Elders' new book, "Marian's Folly," fell still-born from the press. Nobody knew exactly why. However, there was a slight interest manifested when it was prosecuted. Elders got six months in the penitentiary.

"Just bad luck, Jim," said Mrs. Harrison tearfully. "There was not a thing the matter with it, except that it was a teeny bit frank. Those horrid juries. . . . However, it had been common saying that Mr. Harrison was dangerous game. Her own friends began to fight shy of her—until Tom Chalmers came along.

Tom was a fishing wizard in Wall street. He had led several raids into Harrison's territories, but those so daring as this one, when he set out to capture Anna.

The news was soon public property. Sensational situations in the stock market were the order of the day. And then—all at once it was as if a mouse had interlocked horns, and the war in Wall street was the news of the hour.

A score of ancient enemies whom Harrison had half forgotten leaped at his throat. Chalmers led the bayonet charge. In a night Great Southwestern preferred from 284 to 277. Harrison faced ruin.

He was not a man to squeal. He was playing a game when he said to his wife: "We've been rather badly hit, Anna. We may have to sell this house and move into an apartment for a while." Anna went white. "Do you mean to tell me you've been speculating, Jim?" she demanded.

Harrison smiled. He had never done anything else. His smile infuriated her. "A man who can't provide for his wife properly, but sings his money away in speculation doesn't deserve to have one of his legs cut off the way I've come to the end. We must part, that's all."

Harrison smiled again, and Anna left the room. There followed a week of strained relations. Anna was constantly preparing for a journey. Meanwhile the Wall street war went on. Harrison had called in his securities. Harrison was borrowing—or trying to borrow. The pack had tasted blood. The chase grew hotter. And then—what happened?

Great Southwestern had rallied. It was going up and up. It was reported Harrison had been bearing his own stock and selling—selling it touched 400. Harrison was unmaking.

"Sulds of Prominent Financier—Thomas Chalmers Shoots Himself!" That was the heading in the morning newspapers. Anna Harrison read it with trembling lips. "Isn't it dreadful, Jim!" she said. "Who would have thought that the poor man would be so foolish as to speculate like that?"

Jim Harrison smiled. His wife went out of the room, dabbing at her eyes with her handkerchief. A little later he followed her up the stairs. Anna Harrison was unmaking.

Plane Fair-Weather. A Washington (D. C.) woman who is spending the summer in Maine took for her summer residence a century-old furnished house. It was found necessary to use the kitchen as a guest chamber, but the question arose as to what would be done with the old-fashioned square piano and where a bed could be placed. The hostess finally conceived the idea of turning the piano upside down and making a four-poster bed of it. A canopy was made, a chair curtain added, springs placed in position, and a genuine antique four-poster was the result.

General News

The editor of a country newspaper received from a subscriber the query:—"Can you tell me what the weather is likely to be next week?" In reply he wrote: "It is my belief that the weather next week is likely to be very much like your subscription." The inquirer puzzled his head for an hour over what the editor was driving at, when finally he happened to think of the word "unsettled." He sent a cheque the next day.

Mr. Win McPhail, Campbellville tax collector for the Township, took a paralytic stroke a week ago. He is in a serious condition.

Reeve R. Smith of Bolton met with a distressing accident Friday when walking on the icy sidewalk in the village. He fell and struck his head, inflicting a gash that required four stitches. He is resting comfortably at his home, though much shaken.

Official statistics show the increasing popularity of Canada among emigrants from British and other countries. For the ten months there was an increase of 63 per cent. in the number of arrivals over the same period in 1925. In addition, 42,026 Canadians returned from the United States, after having entered that country with the intention of remaining there permanently.

The enrollment of pupils in the Public Schools in the five towns of Halton County last year was as follows: Acton, 354; Georgetown, 392; Milton, 447; Burlington, 608; Oakville, 677. The percentage of attendance was: Georgetown, 93; Acton, 92; Milton, 92; Burlington, 90; and Oakville, 87.

The election expenses of George Hillmer, M. P. of Oakville, Conservative candidate in Halton County in the recent provincial contest, as filed by his financial agent amounted to $407.98 and those of his opponent, Harry M. Feltus of Freeman, Progressive candidate, to $389.04.

On Saturday Mrs. Bert Smith, of Nelson, leaned against a barn door at home. It was not fastened. It opened and Mrs. Smith fell ten feet to the ground. She was taken to Halton County Hospital, where she is doing fairly well, but hip bones knit slowly as a rule.

Hamilton Garbutt threatened for Isaac McCready, of Esquimaux, his 1926 crop on Feb. 10th and 11th, 1927. This is one of the latest threshings on record in Esquimaux for many years. McCready says the machine used is one of the best cleaning grain.

Nicholas Hugh Tighe, of Edmonton, formerly of Toronto, died in Calgary in his 43rd year. The late Mr. Tighe was a son of Thomas Tighe, of Inglewood, and had been in the West for the past 15 years, where he was conductor on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

That the Trafalgar residents are eager for improved roads was plainly evident at the council meeting on Monday. There were three or four deputations appearing asking for the "stoning" of several roads.

Farmers of the east side of Chingonny Township will make war on the chicken thief at the result of another raid on the poultry yards of Walter Nealey, of the sixth line, early Monday morning. Forty birds were taken and the tracks of the thieves were traced to a swamp nearby, where their truck had been parked.

The officers and members of L.O.L. No. 112, Erin, are making preparations for a monster celebration to be held in Erin, on July 12, next. Dufferin County Lodges, which include a large district, have already signified their intention to celebrate in Erin as well as numbers of other outside lodges.

Two Chinese of Dixie, named Hoy and March, had their four tires and inner tubes stolen from their car. The vehicle was garaged and when they went to get it the next morning found it all nicely jacked up minus all four tires. The loss is placed at $55, but no trace of the thieves has been discovered.

Mrs. Aedra S. Fisher, the former Countess De Beaumont, was awarded alimony of $26,000 a year to-day from her cartoonist husband, Harry C. (Bud) Fisher, from whom she was granted legal separation last week.

The British House of Commons contains 615 members distributed as follows according to population: England, 492; Wales and Monmouth, 36; Scotland, 74; Northern Ireland, 13.

Owing to shortage of wood, the ch' local plant at Thornbury, which has been in operation seventeen or eighteen years, giving employment to about twenty men, will be closed down for good.

The carillon of 53 bells, which are being cast in England for the Canadian House of Parliament at Ottawa, will be the largest in the world; and have seven bells more than the largest carillon in England.

Take No Thought

My hardest climb up steepest mountain side,
Has e'er been an imaginary one.
That day, so task filled that all ouraged, did not have down, or see the set of sun.

My longest bridge o'er darkly swollen stream,
Whose turbulence my heart beats
well-nigh stilled,
A phantom structure proved. An evil dream.

And in its place lay meadows
blossom filled,
Those evil tidings that so sorely
gripped, my mind with dark forebodings,
nameless dread,
Were fanned all. A courier sweet-
lipped,
Did herald messages of joy instead,
Lord, of this anxious-hearted child
of Thine,

Safe sheltered, in the hollow of
"Thy Hand,
Has spotted meadow with to-day's roses.
In tarmed mold illusion took command.

Dear Lord, each recess of my heart
so fill
With such sweet sense of trust,
that I may scoff
At spectral terrors, for sufficient until
Onto the day the evil is thereof.

Evelyn E. Pascock

Notes and Comments

MEN and women who serve on the various public bodies are giving much of their time to the transaction of the people's business. In this work they deserve the support of the citizens. They cannot please everyone - in fact their usefulness will be gone if they make this a primary consideration in dealing with public questions. Ratepayers will greatly facilitate the work of those bodies if they will abstain from petty fault-finding and strive to aid their representatives with constructive criticism and helpful ideas, remembering that every citizen has a direct personal concern in having the operation of civic affairs as successful as it is possible to make it.

ALL motorists are agreed that advertising signs erected along the highways are a nuisance and a danger, and admirers of natural beauty, whether motorists or not, are loud in the condemnation of the posters as a desecration of a countryside. This chorus of disapproval has long been heard, and just now there are encouraging indications that it has not altogether in vain. For years an organized movement has been at work to diminish, and if possible, to remove the nuisance; advertisers have themselves taken the initiative in some cases, voluntarily abandoning a form of publicity which is so offensive to the public taste. On the expiration of existing contracts many large concerns in the United States have pledged themselves to discontinue their wayside advertising, and similar action has been taken by a number of Canadian firms.—Hamilton Spectator.
