Having Splinter From Finger Wounded Splinter and Hearing. It was a blow on the cheek during a boxing match that left Ernest Barabe deaf and dumb for two years. Recently he got a splinter in his finger and went to a doctor to have it removed. It was so deeply embedded and the finger so badly inflamed that the doctor recommended an anesthetic. The splinter was removed, then, as the patient came round, an attendant looked into his eyes and said:

"Leave me alone!" he cried loudly and clearly. "You quite all right," he said, and now looks and speaks as well as ever he did. This is by no means the only case in which a surgical operation has had a result not expected by the operator. A blind man, who was also dumb, was sent from a Northamptonshire village to a specialist in Bedford, says a writer in Answers.

An operation was to be performed for the man's eyes, but while waiting for it the patient fell over a chair. When he was picked up it was found that he could speak. The operation was successful, and the patient's surprise and delight, his sight returned.

There was a man of thirty, whose case is recorded in the Lancet, who was operated on for cancer in the Glasgow Ophthalmic Institute. His last breath came from him. The operation successfully restored his sight, but here is the extraordinary story—the skull fell over a chair, color yellow it made him quite sick. On the other hand, red gave him the greatest pleasure.

In 1914 a Hungarian called Salkeley, who was in the state prison of St. Paul, Minn., was sentenced to a life term for murder. He had a dreadful accident, resulting in his head being cut by a saw. The skull damage was such a man was a giant brute, hardly human, who inspired sheer terror in his fellow-prisoners. The prison doctor had to operate in a hurry to save the man's life. Salkeley recovered rapidly, and when he had become a bright, kindly, intelligent person, obedient, cheerful, and ready to help his wardens or his fellow-prisoners in any way possible. Jesse Beard's was a similar case. Here was a boy of fifteen who was injured by a fall from a tree. He had a head injury, and when an operation was performed it was found that his brain was as soft as putty, and this continued until the whole of the brain was as black as the skin of the negro girl herself.

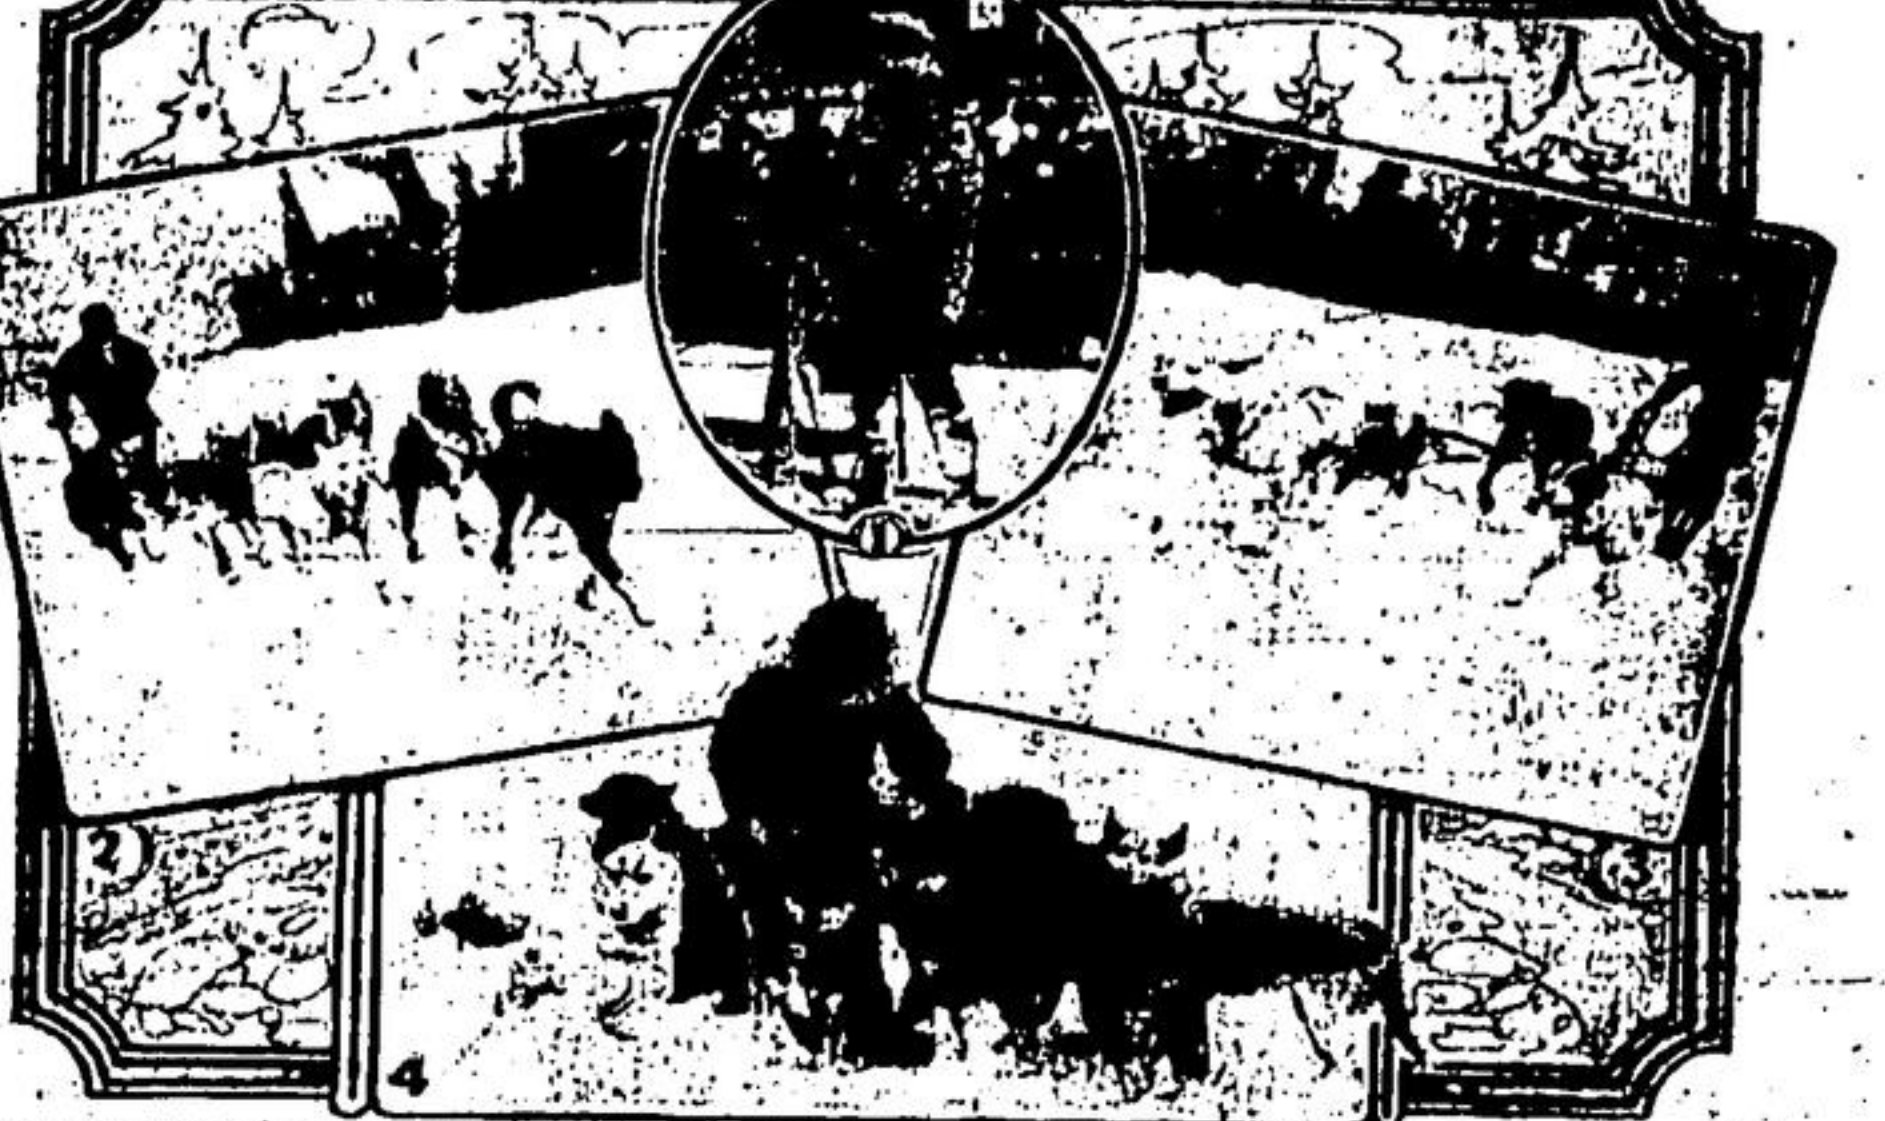

Why is Seven a Lucky Number?
 From the very earliest times certain numbers have been credited with mystic powers, three and seven, for instance, being the most sacred, while thirteen was ill-omened. The precise reasons have never been definitely settled by scholars, but the "seven" superstition has always been thought to have been based on primitive magic, or on a knowledge of astronomy. For instance, there were seven days to each phase of the moon, and only seven planets at first known to the ancients. It is probable that from this reason the number seven first acquired its connotation of "luck." So we get the seven virtues, the seven sleepers, and so on. Modern science, even after the discovery of the law of gravitation, has not been able to explain why our bodies renew themselves every seven years, or why we have a "seven" belief may have a real foundation dating far into the past of the race.

Large Islands.
 Greenland, a Danish possession, is considered to be the largest island in the world, with an area of 1,130,000 square miles. The second island in size is New Guinea, in the South Pacific. It has an area of 330,000 square miles. Following it are the islands of New Zealand, in the Pacific, and also belonging to Great Britain and Holland, is third in size, with an area of 280,000 square miles.

The Petroleum Output.
 The petroleum output of the world is about nearly 1,000,000,000 barrels of 42 gallons.

A Lengthy Waterway.
 The length of the waterway opened up by the Suez Canal is 100 miles.

Youth Victorious in Quebec Dog Derby

Youth made a successful bid for supremacy in the dog racing realm when Emile St. Godard, 19-year old dog musher from The Pas, Manitoba, won the Eastern International Dog Derby held at Quebec February 21, 22 and 23. His team of seven highly-trained greyhound hounds dashed over the finish line of the "three-day" race, covering the 150 gruelling miles in 11 hours and 37 1/2 minutes, beating all previous records by 54 minutes and 35 seconds. He secured the second time, the first in 1925, the handsome cup donated by the Quebec International Dog Derby Club.

Leonard Sappala, hero of the epic race with serum to the stricken Alaskan city of Nome, was a strong contender in the Quebec classic and finished just 20 minutes behind St. Godard. Sappala, experienced driver as he is, was forced to give way to a man 20 years younger, driving a team of better trained hounds than his own. Sappala bettered St. Godard's time by several minutes in the last day of the race, as the winner was forced to stay on the sled a greater part of the race owing to a strain- tion in his leg. George Chevrolet disputed every inch of the hilly course for second place but was beaten out by the Alaskan musher. "Paddy" Nolan the 15-year old contestant made one of the most remarkable showings in dog racing, although he finished fourth out of fourteen entries. He added glory to the reputation made last year, when, although his dogs were disqualified for fighting, he stuck to the trail and finished ninth in a field of 30, the whole of the distance being run in a blinding blizzard. A groom however has been cast over the Jordan hound recently for the day after Paddy's great race his mother, who had been lying ill in the hospital, died. After each day of the race Paddy would leave his dogs in charge of his friends and go to his mother's bedside at the hospital. The course of this lad is a general topic of discussion, and old and experienced mushers are concerned over his performance.

Young St. Godard hails from the northern Manitoba town where the use of dogs is a commercial necessity. He was the dog racing in Canada first took place. A group of devotees, wishing to perpetuate the Alaskan Sweepstakes, which died out in 1915, gathered in the Snake Room of the Opaquai Hotel and arranged to hold an annual race which they have carried out. St. Godard has been the winner of this long race at The Pas several years, including the race in January.

Out of 100 dogs in the recent race at Quebec, there were but three recognized "lead" dogs. They were "Tobby" St. Godard's leader; "Prits", Sappala's lead dog and "Rover" trained by the youthful Nolan. Frank Dupuis, winner of the race last year, finished fifth with but three dogs in harness. It is the driver who can successfully train the leader of the pack who is going to pilot his team to victory. Dogs in a team are not unlike any other racing animals; there must be a guide. Sappala's famous Alaskan malamutes entered the Canadian race this year scintillatingly. They battled heroically but lost to a better-trained team.
