> GOLF is one of the heat tests of men there is. You learn from a man's golf game how well he can stand disappointments, and how li takes such successes as a ten-yard putt. You learn how persistent he is or how easily beaten. You fine out what kind of sport he is, thus, what kind of man. When some golfers book or slice their balls, they look at the ground, as though to blame Mother Earth for their sividen defect. Some look at their clubs, us though some imperfection in their construction hall been suddenly revealed. Some men laugh, others swear. Such is golf, indeed, and such is life.

No. 467, for the former times boys or girls considered themselves fortunate in having nickel to spend on a days celebration. Nowadays they think they are cheatad if a dollar is given them to spend. Too much generosity gives them no idea of the value of money and their habits of spending become so established in early life that many are tempted when they reach manhood to get money in any way they can and frequently come to grief as a consequence. A small allowance is perfectly all right, but too much generosity is a mistaken kindness and is sure to have a disastrous effect upon the boy or girl later in life.
