A Boy and His Dog

A boy and his dog make a glorious pair. Their friendship is found anywhere they go.

For they talk and they wait and they play and they run and they play and they play and they wait and they wait and they wait and they wait.

And they have their deep secrets for many a day.

And that boy has a comrade who thinks and who feels.

Who walks down the road with a dog at his heels.

He may go where he will and his dog will be there.

May veer in mud and his dog will not care.

Faithful he'll stay for the slightest command.

And bark with delight at the touch of his hand.

Oh, he owns a treasure which nobody can steal.

Who walks down the road with a dog at his heels.

No other can lure him away from his side.

He's proud against riches and station and pride.

For the dog does not charm him, and the boy's love is not vain.

For the dog, for his faithful and loyal friend, is lost on death.

It's a great to be young with a dog at your heels.

—Edgar A. Guest in "When Days are Done."

WHERE YOU EVER HUNGRY?

Of course you have been hungry many times. Normally, not unpleasantly hungry. Sometimes on a cold day after exercise in the open air, it seemed you could scarcely wait until the regular dinner hour.

Visualized a beautiful table, and hoped that for dessert there would be some favorite dainty, and what an unsatisfying lunch you have had.

This is one kind of hunger, but there is another! The hunger which accounts for the "cradle" to the grave.

The hunger which has never been fully satisfied, and probably will be in this life, and which could be so easily relieved at any man's door, but so rarely.

Have you ever been so hungry that you gave up the quest for food and sat idly waiting, half hoping for death? Have you ever been kicked and stoned when you sought a morsel of something in the form of food? Have you ever been so gaunt from hunger that your bones stared upon you?

Have you ever, while suffering the torments of starvation had a group of humans sit down in your presence and eat and eat and eat and never offer you a mouthful, and when gorged, so monstrously upon their several plates, have you never a blush for their lack of humanity? And were you so amiable by nature that you harbored no grudge upon those who have treated you so simply regarding them as puzzled wonder?

Did you ever in the extremes of cold and hunger, on a bitter winter day find your way to a large comfortable heated building known to humans as a church, and crouch in its walls in an effort to receive a little of its warmth, possibly manage to get into the vestibule, and when the men were over, have some "higher animal" in a hurry to get home to dinner, trample upon you and kick you into the sleet and snow, and did you ever pick yourself humbly and dumbly up and go in search of another warm spot, and another kick?

Did you ever sit in hunger, cold and waiting, and realize that every man, woman and child who passed you, sat down to a square meal and that every man, woman and child who passed you, were not expected to eat?

Such is the nature of hunger, with a pleasant, anticipatory hunger, think long and think deeply, then arise and act.

—David Lee Wharton.

Serious Bowel Condition Relieved by "Fruit-a-tives"

Mr. James Page of Colham, P.Q., was in a very deplorable condition. His constipation from which he had suffered for five years was undermining his whole system. DISINFECTANT

So many enquiries have been made concerning the disinfection of a room or house after a case of communicable disease has occurred, that the matter is chosen for the subject of this article. The objective of disinfection is to destroy the germs which cause disease and prevent their further spread.

Germs are everywhere. They are in the air, on the floor, on the walls, on the furniture, and on the people themselves. They are everywhere, and they are everywhere.

The objective of disinfection is to destroy the germs which cause disease and prevent their further spread. This is done by the use of disinfectants.

Disinfectants are substances which destroy or kill germs. They are used in many places, such as in hospitals, in schools, and in homes.

The use of disinfectants is important in preventing the spread of disease. It is especially important in the case of communicable diseases, such as typhoid, cholera, and diphtheria.

OVERLOOKED BURNING BOARD IN THE CAUSE OF ACCIDENT

On Monday two young ladies were travelling west on the highway, near the fifth line, when they passed a car, going in the same direction. The car, in motion had the running board loaded with luggage and after passing a large parcel dropped into the roadway. To the motorist following the bundle looked like a human being fallen from the car, and in order to avoid striking the object the Georgetown motorist took the only other alternative of going into the ditch. His car was overturned and considerably damaged, although he escaped without serious injury.—Acton Free Press.

A First Aider to the Rescue

"I was going to work on my motorcycle," explained the victim of a serious accident as he lay on a nearby hospital cot, "when an auto came out of an alley, threw me to the pavement, tearing my foot off and severing an artery. Fortunately a Bell Telephone man was passing. He stopped the bleeding, made a tourniquet and had me in a fine shape when the ambulance arrived."

Instruction classes in all ranks of telephone employees have turned out an army of skilled First Aiders who are continually happening along when some victim of serious mishap is in dire need of assistance. Knowing what to do and just how to do it has saved many lives. Seventy per cent of all Bell Plant workers are qualified First Aiders.
