Health Service of the Canadian Medical Assoc.

Why Report Communicable Diseases?

There exist, in all parts of Canada, laws which require that, when a communicable disease occurs, its occurrence shall be promptly reported to the health authorities. It is known that such reporting is not by any means complete, as is also the fact that many law-abiding citizens evade the law in this respect whenever possible.

The reporting of certain disease is required by law for several reasons. In the first place, the health authorities who are for the control of communicable diseases cannot set the control machinery to work until they know that disease exists. The control does not consist merely in placing a placard on the house and quarantining the inmates. That is part of the work, but a more important phase is that of tracing back and finding the source of the case. If this is done the source is removed and other cases prevented. If a case is not reported, the source is not removed and the disease continues to be responsible for more cases.

It is the reporting of an unusual number of cases of typhoid fever which first directs the attention of the health authorities to the need for action to discover the break in the protective machinery. If the first knowledge they have is of the death which occurs, needless delay in dealing with the cause results; many more lives and deaths follow because of this delay.

The control of communicable diseases is a community problem. Its success will be largely measured by the extent to which all citizens cooperate in the effort. Just as long as cases are hidden or not being reported in order to evade some personal inconvenience in the isolation in the home is properly carried out, the health authorities are being hampered in their efforts to protect the community.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St. Toronto, will be answered by letter. Questions as to diagnosis and treatment will not be answered.

Is this true of your town?

Just as there are farmers who make very good money by generally cultivating a few acres, so there are merchants in small towns who do surprisingly large business.

Of course, they too cultivate their territory intensively. They don't wait for their customers to come to them—they go to their customers with frequent offers of what they know will tempt them. And they seem to sell everybody.

So regularly do they keep in touch with their customers that their offers of merchandise are eagerly awaited, and are read as if they were news—which they are.

These merchants use Long Distance frequently, to order goods for prompt shipment or to fill in orders, and they find it good business to call important customers and Distance to advise them of opportunities.

CORRESPONDENCE

212 Evelyn Ave., Toronto, November 24th, 1928.

Mr. Editor:

Feeling an interest in the Evening Telegram last evening that municipal matters in Georgetown were very quiet, I confirm me in the opinion I have had for some time that the ratepayers of Georgetown should wake up and give the old town a change. You have the location and beautiful surroundings. All you want is good government to make the town one of the most desirable within easy reach of the city. The report says that Georgetown has everything that a town could wish for. Well has it. I have been under the impression for a long time that it lacks the most important thing that a town of two thousand inhabitants requires to make it a desirable place to live in. True, you have a good water supply including good fire protection secured at moderate price and the revenue from the system given proper management should have paid the whole cost. The town has had the system for about twenty-five years, less an additional supply that has been added at a heavy price and the cost. You should have had sewers next to complete the system. You got them at a moderate price and the town and know the need can never be made to feel that it is a desirable thing to have without some help and even strangers get a bad impression. I was forcibly reminded of this when I visited the town last night. I met a gentleman at the station who I took an interest in. He had been in the town and had never lived in Georgetown and had only been here three or four times on his way to visit a family in the Scotch Black. He said Georgetown had always struck him as a very unwholesome place—think of it! He said he had never lived in Georgetown and had always struck him as a very unwholesome place—think of it! He said he had never lived in Georgetown and had always struck him as a very unwholesome place—think of it! The Outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet History

- a Six in the price range of the four!

THE Chevrolet Motor Company of Canada, Limited, announces "The Outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet History... a Six in the price range of the four!"

Spectacular as Chevrolet's achievements have been in the past... notable as its engineering triumphs have proved themselves to be—this remarkable new car dwarfs every previous Chevrolet accomplishment. Not only does it introduce into the low-priced field an entirely new measure of performance, comfort, beauty and style—but it is sold at prices so low as to alter every previous conception of motor car value.

The new six-cylinder valve-in-head engine—developed from more than a hundred motors designed especially for this sensational car—stands out as an engineering masterpiece. With a power increase of approximately 32% over the previous Chevrolet motor, with sensationally greater speed and faster acceleration—it offers a type of performance that is literally astounding—even to those who have been driving cars costing hundreds of dollars more.

Throughout the entire speed range, it performs with a smoothness and quietness of operation that have never before been approached in a low-priced automobile. At the slower speeds of city traffic it idles along with wonderful silence and ease. On highways and country roads it responds with an ease that is a constant delight. It takes the longest and steepest hills with an abundant reserve of power that is a source of pride to the driver.

And its economy of operation averages better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline!

In appearance, this Outstanding Chevrolet is so smart, so stylish and so distinctively appointed that it stands the closest custom creation. The new Fisher bodies are longer, lower and roomier with adjustable driver's seat in all closed models—and reveal the machine artistry of Fisher designers. You are cordially invited to visit our showroom and secure complete and detailed information on this sensational new car which will be ready for delivery beginning January 1st.
