THE MYSTERY

What is this glory nature makes us feel, And rife so sweet within us? Can it be That there with man is kindred mystery Of being, old heredity Of bud and leaf, of pulsing plant and tree, And earth and air; that in some hidden speech, Ere words had being—doth our spirits reach; Some essence akin to music, subtle, deep? That plumbs our souls, as dreams melt through our sleep?

Yes, it must be, for often unto me A fallen leaf hath greater power to stir Than mighty volumes of earth's history.

Of all the tragedy of life's great bluntness, What is it? that so little, plant or flower, A sunset or a sunrise gives us wings, Or opens doors of glory every hour, To godlike thoughts—and life imaginings? Yes, 'tis a greatness that about us lies: Within our touch-prevailing air and sod, That bounds our being—hidden from our eyes— But, inwardly, guiding men to God.

THE CHOICE OF A HOME

When the choice of a dwelling is to be made, we may be reminded that it is the people who will live in it who will determine whether or not it is a real home. Accepting such a statement without discussion, we think it also true that the type of dwelling, with either hinder or help in making of a home.

Development of the body and mind requires certain physical conditions. Proper development demands fresh air, water, food, sleep, exercise and protection. It is a matter of common sense, then, to make these obtainable in the dwelling if the home is to give the children those surrounding favourable to healthy growth.

The best mother in the world cannot make fresh air and sunshine appear in a room without a window, any more than she can prepare a proper meal without some cooking facilities.

A baby may thrive for the first year or two in a flat or apartment. After that, he requires space to play in. He should have freedom and should not be restrained within narrow bounds. When there are children, the home should have a yard, or at least, be near a park where the children may go regularly to play.

During the early years of life, it is much more important for the child that there be a place where he may play with other children than that the house have all the modern comforts and conveniences. In order to live we must have air.

If deprived of air for a few minutes, we cease to live. We require the oxygen in the air to maintain body functions. In addition to providing oxygen, the air in which we live has a tremendous influence upon us. It is a matter of common experience that in what we think of as a hot, close atmosphere, we are dull and listless, whereas in the fresh, cool air, we feel bright and active.

Everyone, including the children, should live in fresh, cool air. The best place to secure sun air is out in the open. Children should spend a large part of their lives playing or sleeping out of doors. Indoors, we should keep the air of the home fresh by ventilation, using suitable doors and windows to keep the air cool and in gentle motion.

In choosing a home, bear in mind the need for playgrounds, and for windows to let in fresh air and sunshine.

WHAT IS A FRIEND?

The sunshine of calamity. The essence of pure devotion. The ripe fruit of acquaintance. Friendship, one soul in two bodies. A star of hope in the cloud of adversity. A volume of sympathy bound in cloth. A diamond in the ring of acquaintance. A light clay loam with good moisture holding capacity and a moderately pervious subsoil. It has been shown also, that apple trees will grow on so-called poor soils and will give good results if properly managed. Soil drainage however, is an important factor in relation to tree growth and productivity. Fruit trees require a good range for root development and this desirable condition does not obtain on poorly drained soil. It is thus seen that for permanent and profitable results the soil for apples and other fruit trees as well should be deeply and thoroughly drained by natural or artificial means.

Must be Well-Drained

The ideal soil for apples seems to be a deep, well-drained sandy loam or a light clay loam with good moisture holding capacity and a moderately pervious subsoil. It has been shown also, that apple trees will grow on so-called poor soils and will give good results if properly managed. Soil drainage however, is an important factor in relation to tree growth and productivity. Fruit trees require a good range for root development and this desirable condition does not obtain on poorly drained soil. It is thus seen that for permanent and profitable results the soil for apples and other fruit trees as well should be deeply and thoroughly drained by natural or artificial means.

Apple Market in West

The belief is expressed by W. B. Somerset, former overseas representative of the Ontario Fruit Growers, that the fruit growers of this province have an extensive and profitable market awaiting them in the Canadian West if they will only go after it. There is very little direct competition between Ontario and British Columbia in the prairie market except in tonnage because in apples the British Columbia grower confines himself very largely to fancy boxes predominantly of early varieties. With a good pack of later sorts in bushel hampers, Mr. Somerset sees no reason why the Ontario grower could not sell a great deal of fruit.
