A SMILE

With a pleasant smile and a kindly word. What wonders we can do. A pleasant smile, though never heard, works quietly like the dew. The effect spreads wide like the ocean. It strikes us where we know not where. Its influence spreads, though not a word is said. 'Tis captivating and eases our care. We know not what the outcome will be. Or how far the smile may roll. It irradiates like the sun's bright rays. And brightens and nurtures each soul. So give a smile whenever you can. It costs nothing to give, so give while you live. And try always to smile, smile, smile. —J. B. Rittenhouse.

HALTON RIFLES

By Col. Jas. Ballantine, D.S.O., V.D.
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
What have kings that private have not. Save ceremony? —Henry Fifth 4-1
Relative to the officers of the British and Australian Armies, the Canadian Rifle Brigade, which was formed in London in 1915, was considerably less than the British Army Officer, and about half of the Australian. The Canadian had to purchase from his own salary, all his uniform and equipment, pay his marching fees, and of course was required like all officers to travel first class, and to appear only at the first class hotels when on leave. When on leave in London he learned that in that great metropolis a penny would buy more, and a pound less, than in any other city. He was in other words, the private on leave, travelling third class, could have as good a time on his own money as officer could have on as many pounds. All officers were required to open accounts in the Bank of Montreal in Trafalgar Square in London, and Heaven help the sinner who overtook his account in the Bank of Montreal. In civil life if one overdraws, he is served with a courteous notice to that effect, and there is little use in sending a check to cover the overdraft, as the old lady did; but in the Canadian Army he was served with a notice that was neither courteous nor kind, and told to report at once for transfer to Canada. Rather rough justice, what? In the case of these officers, the Canadian Expeditionary Force was no money making institution, and it was always a source of wonder to me that the junior officers were able to make both ends meet.

The first weeks on the Plains was spent in getting the officers of the Fourth properly outfitted, and to that end our lines were beset with tailors from London—Triumph and Company, number one Saville Row, to be exact, and others—who knew all the curves and angles of the human frame and how to make the fat appear less fat, and the overcoat appear less overcoat. When it came to the fitting of riding breeches—breeches—Hawke and Company are in a field by themselves. It is a trade that carries them to goods to all parts of the world, where men ride to hounds, belong to Regiments, or ride just for the fun of riding. I give the address of these tailors, in case some of you fellows still owe me some money, and not because I am on their pay roll. The officers of the Fourth adopted a different style of collar, from that used in the Imperial Army, a high stock collar similar to that of the men. In years past a distinction was made between the collar of a sergeant and that of a subaltern, and the low cut collar, with shirt collar and khaki necktie became universal, and has recently been adopted by the American Army. Verily, imitation is the sincerest form of flattery. So much for that, and now for the Brussels Sprouts, the very mention of which will cause gastronomic disturbances in any Fourth Battalion Officer who chances to peruse those lines. The caterer of the Officers Mess was Harrod's of London, and it may be that these worthy people, and well known merchants, had invested too heavily in Brussels Sprouts that Fall of 1914; but in any case they supplied these vegetables to our Mess in Carleton Place, and fed them to our officers till they saw them in their dreams as a terror. The mess was a high class, and the quality of the food was excellent. The mess was a high class, and the quality of the food was excellent. The mess was a high class, and the quality of the food was excellent.

GENERAL NEWS
Fire thought to have originated in an incubator, completely destroyed the farm and chicken hatchery on the property of R. S. Marshall, Nelson Township, about 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning. The loss together with about 400 eggs and 200 chicks, was estimated at about $3,000. Insurance of $1600 was carried by the farmer. Wellington county council has decided to spend $400,000 this year on permanent roads, bridges and maintenance. Miss Anderson, of Acton, has completed the first volume of her book, "The Toronto Daily Globe to say that it would be moved next winter. Col. McEnderick, of Trafalgar, writes to the Toronto Daily Globe to say that he is not in favor of the pasteurization of milk. If the milk is from good, healthy cows, there is no need, he says, of its being pasteurized; and if the milk is not from healthy cows, pasteurization will not make it good milk. A special meeting of the Old Age Pensioners' Commission for Halton county, was held on Thursday last. There were eight applications for pensions, including two from inmates of the Halton-Well House of Refuge at Brampton. The applications were granted, which brings the total of old age pensioners in Halton county up to 121. Russell Conover, of Trafalgar Township, tripped over a board recently, and found his right knee on a stone. An X-ray revealed a double fracture of the knee-cap, which necessitated the knee being pinned to the bone. Mr. Conover has always been an active man and he has the sympathy of all his friends in his misfortune.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE
On Wednesday last, Mrs. W. B. Shortall, Edith St., was the hostess to the May meeting of the Georgetown Women's Institute. After the opening exercises the roll was called, the members responding with the quotation of a common superstition. As this was the annual meeting the minutes of the previous annual meeting were read and reports received from the secretary-treasurer, the auditor and the convener of various committees. There followed the election of officers. Mrs. Freure was appointed chairman for the election, and Mrs. E. Darling and Mrs. N. Snyder acted as scrutineers. The officers were elected by ballot as follows:
President—Mrs. Clarence Hayes
1st Vice-pres.—Mrs. D. Livingston
2nd Vice-pres.—Mrs. E. Feller
Sec.—Mrs. Percy Cleave
Asst. Sec.—Mrs. P. B. Hill
Dist. Director—Mrs. Percy Cleave
Branch Directors—Mrs. V. King, E. M. Whittier, Mrs. F. McNally, Mrs. P. Cole.
Representatives to District Annual Meeting—Mrs. Robt. Evans, Mrs. Geo. Ford, Mrs. C. Freure, Mrs. P. Cleave, Mrs. D. Livingston.
Local Needs Committee—Mrs. Geo. Campbell, Mrs. C. Freure, Mrs. Robt. Erwin.
Social Committee—Mrs. V. King, Mrs. W. R. Anderson.
Visiting Committee—Mrs. Geo. Ford, Mrs. W. V. Grant, Mrs. F. Braslay, Mrs. Beckwith.
Flower Committee—Mrs. R. Cave, Mrs. J. Ballantine.
Planting—Mrs. E. Hearwell.

Following the election, plans were made to send delegates to the 2nd Annual Halton County Girls' Conference to be held at Milton, May 31st. Arrangements were also made for the Summer Series meeting to be held in Georgetown on May 28th, when Miss Gean Cameron Smith of Orangeville, a noted Institute lecturer, will address a joint meeting of the Georgetown, Norval, Linehouse and Stewartsburg branches.

FATAL MOTOR ACCIDENT NEAR ORANGEVILLE
Mark Starbird, 55 Spruce Hill Rd., Toronto, was killed instantly Sunday afternoon last, when his car plunged through a cable guard on King's highway No. 10, near Orangeville, and careened 35 feet down an embankment. A girl companion who was said to have been in the car with Starbird at the time was unhurt. Orangeville police refused to reveal her identity or whether she is being held. She was about 17 years old, which he was regarded till the time of his death. Lord Kitchener was too efficient to be loved but he could be admired. He took fortitude, luck and the services of his two imposters just for the same. So for those days, Kitchener was one man that England needed, and her confidence was not misplaced. This Majesty was in no way inferior to nature; he appealed to the emotional nature of the men. He could walk and talk with kings, and his touch, and he had that rare gift of talking to a soldier without creating a trace of uneasiness in the mind of the soldier. He must have suffered terribly as the multitudes of casualties appeared in the daily papers, and his heart must have broken for the slaughter of these boys of his, for whom he had such a deep sympathy.

HOW ARE YOU?
If the subject of conversation is an indication of interest in the subject, then, without doubt, health comes first in the public interest, since the question most frequently asked is—How are you?
What is your answer today, and what is it going to be in the future? Are you making things pleasant for yourself and for those with whom you live and work? Because you are happy with the joy of good health, it depends upon you one of those depressing persons who demands sympathy because he looks so miserable? Do not let your health be due to neglect of those essential which can easily be secured by most people and which do not cost money. The proper kind of food costs no more than the wrong kind. Fresh air and sunshine are to be had for the asking. Sleep is not for sale; it means a proper bed-time. Exercise, rest and cleanliness are essential, secured by making a reasonable effort. These are the factors upon which personal health so largely depends. They are under our own control; nobody can help us very much in securing them. If we want to enjoy health, we cannot neglect them.
Too many late dances which take up the time for sleep, too much living in artificial light and not enough exercise, too many sweets between meals spoiling the appetite for proper food; indoor parties instead of outdoor exercise, are some of the common reasons for ill health.
In addition to neglecting themselves, many persons are, in other ways, particularly careless as regards the health of others. They cough and sneeze without covering the nose and mouth; they talk right into your face; they kiss the baby on the neck, or, in fact, they do about everything they can to spread to everyone they chance to meet any disease germs which may be present in their own noses.
Many are also careless of themselves in disregarding the limits within which they may expect their bodies to function normally. The human body is not made to keep within the limits, it begins to break. It is a matter of common sense to keep within the limits. Success is empty which is gained at the expense of a wrecked body. Health without wealth is preferable to wealth without health.
Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 154 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.
—Toastmaster (to principal speaker: "Oh, Mr. Brady")
Speaker—"Yes."
—Toastmaster—"Had we better have your speech now, or shall we let the people enjoy themselves a little while longer?"
