Price-per-Gallon" is a very deceiving basis on which to judge the Cost of Paint, as is shown below in the comparative costs of painting two houses of the same size.

All things being equal, the Higher the Price-per Gallon, the higher the quality—and the lower the initial or ultimate cost of paint is sure to be. Cheap "Price-per-Gallon" Paint not only increases the cost of painting, but also the cost of labor; of protection and the cost of repainting. These points are illustrated in the following comparison.
