All the pheasants were removed some time ago and the pens and other buildings were disposed of last week at very cheap prices. However, there is one item the authorities will not likely move and that is the hundreds of owle that were shot or caught and thrown into heaps or tied in trees to scare off the marauders. Supt. Johnson had posts erected at various points, throughout the island and placed traps thereon to capture the owis that infested that section: That he was successful is shown by the hundreds of dead owls that are to be seen in a large haw tree, near the pheasant pens. At the present time there is very little water in the reservoir of the lake. In eact, at present the water is lower than at any time
