NOTES AND COMMENTS

IN SPITE of dark shadows of graft chipidbloodness that continually and then there arises a bright spot restores faith in the humanity and bigh ethics of the majority of those who constitute the business world. The outstanding current evidence of this is the story of John G. Jenkins of Long Island, who a few weeks ago, after nearly a quarter of a century of struggle, handed over a cheque for $406,000 in final payment of $1,200,000 lost by the depositors in a chain of banks controlled by his father, now deceased. The crash in 1907 caused the father to die of heart failure and the son immediately set about the task of restoring to depositors every penny of the monies entrusted to his father's banks. The $406,000 cheque is the final payment after a 24-year struggle. Canada too as many examples of such high and devoted loyalty in business and many of her leading citizens today have made similar sacrifices to clear their name and prove worthy of the confidence of those with whose money they were entrusted.—Pinancial Post.
