A majority of the fires which have occurred since the fires of October are technically termed "self-heating fires" being produced indirectly from "termentation gas' that develops in cases where hay and grains are hapited to barn-mows without having first been properly cured in the fields. This gas, which is lighter than air and highly inflammable, rises from the grain to the top of the barn, especially where there is lack of adequate ventilation, and only one of the red balloons gripped in children's hands along the lot had burst. The towering tusker seemed to shrink, stopping in his stride with grotesque suddenness. Then, slowly he sank on his side, stretching out on the turf as though to sleep. Men, approaching warily, saw that the bullet had struck true over the left eye, crashing into the brain. Henry walked heavily to his tent. Men, glancing at him, saw the pain and the grief in his eyes and spoke no: word. No man entered his tent that afternoon, but the big show went on, as the big show must always go on, no matter what. In the evening Henry left the show lot, left forever the life he loved, for without Snyder he knew that there was no happiness under the big top for him. He had sought adventure there, and he had found it, sharing it with Snyder: But with the great performing tusker gone the quick, rollicking lifts of the bigsiow band would seem as digres to him. There was his little place in the country near the old winter quarters, and there he returned. That is the story of Henry Wallace, the best known of all the elephant trainers. Coal Wood

Will not announce the return to prosperity!

Prosperity will creep back stealthily No man can say at what time is will arrive. Those who sit and await some signal announcing its return will have little of it when it arrives.

Prosperity never completely leaves. All times are good times for somebody. Good times are here now, to be seized by those who have courage, who want more business and are determined to get it.

In some towns, the progressive merchants are banding themselves together in a united effort to advertise their goods and services throughout their trading area, and are featuring prices that make "buying at home" most advantageous.

The exceptionally large volume of business that flows into Georgetown from all sections of the district is drawn by the good stores, well stocked with quality merchandise, marked at lower prices.

The HERALD as a local newspaper covering this large trading area, and carrying the advertising messages of these alert merchants, has helped to retain this constant business in our own community.

Tell the people of the Community what you have to offer them.
