Beating them all on the "Get-Away"

is a habit
Chevrolet drivers soon acquire

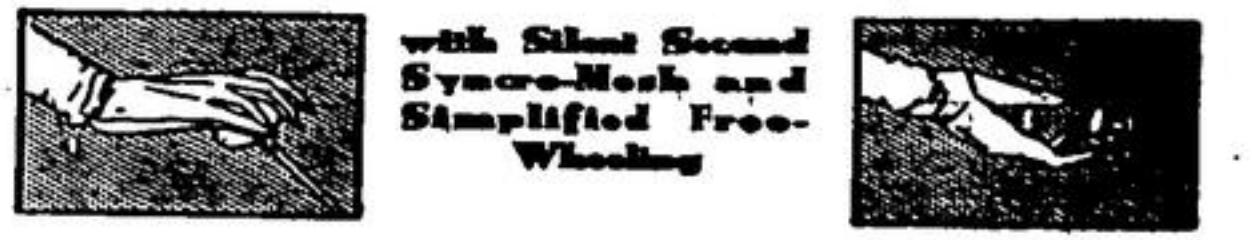

IT'S one of the biggest thrills of modern motoring to get behind the wheel of the new Chevrolet and actually know the advantages of a 60-horsepower, six-cylinder motor, silent Syncro-Mesh shifting, free-wheeling and down-draft carburetor.

Acceleration! When the light flashes green stop on the gas—then glide swiftly away ahead of the traffic! The new Chevrolet gives you matchless "pick-up"—like power that responds to every need. Keep your foot down; watch the speedometer spin up to forty—or forty-five—or more! Then slip the lever high without even a click. That's Syncro-Mesh for you. And you can shift back to second just as easily. If you're "in" free-wheeling you needn't touch the clutch! Once you try the new Chevrolet Six, you'll never be satisfied to drive anything less!

Ask about the GMAC, General Motors' own deferred payment plan. The broad inclusive General Motors Owners Service Policy assures lasting satisfaction.

The Best Cake Jim Ever Tasted

"It's surprising how things go astray. When I was visiting my sister Martha she gave me a new recipe for lemon cake. Yesterday, when I specially wanted it, I couldn't find it anywhere."

"So you had to do without it, I suppose?"

"Oh no, I just called Martha on the telephone and she gave me the recipe over again. Jim said it was the best cake he ever tasted, and I told her 'it's lucky we have a telephone.'

The next evening at dinner the young widow was "surprised". She seemed to be in a light, happy mood. She told Jim she had been so anxious to present him with his cake safe without his being present and not all the guests laughing at his home telling. The host laughed with the rest, and when the man did not smile, she asked him what he could have had in mind. As it was he winced. Mrs. Wood's

EARTH THINGS

I like the purgative smell of earthly things.
A meadow, and a plowed field after rain;
A wine-red patch of clover always brings
The feeling I am nearing home again.
I like the ancient smell of burning wood—

The musky essence of old cedar trees,
Upon a lonely sand dune I have stood
Sniffing the breakers from a thousand seas!

From every corner of the world they blow,

Incense to a deity—
They wake my lagged senses—and bestow
A redolence upon my memory.

Primal odors—I have loved since birth;

Created when God made the fragrant earth!

A DIPLOMATIC AFFAIR

By Ethel Holmes

"Mme. Chapelier!"

"The excellency has dictated me to tell you as soon as you call."

The attendant led the way to the private office of the minister of foreign affairs, opened the door and announced:

"Anne, Chapelier!"

"The government," said the minister, "appreciating your past services is desirous of adding to your annuities already paid you another 50,000 francs."

"I am very grateful," she replied, "but I prefer to add my past services to a corresponding amount."

"Can you leave for London tonight?"

"I will, with pleasure."

The minister cast a look about the room, habitual with him before entering upon a matter involving secrecy, leaned forward in his chair and spoke in a low voice:

"The British government has made a treaty with the ambassador of the sultane porto at London by which the sultane grants valuable concessions to the British. We have been negotiating with the sultane's ambassador here in Paris for these same privileges but we are too late."

"Sir Bradford Chichester, the minister who has been here since the time of the revolution, has arranged passage by sea for Constantine in a ship sailing on the 14th. He will carry with him the British-Turkish treaty for signature at the sultane's court of Constantinople. This is the purpose to delay either starting or on the way."

Mme. Chapelier reached London the next morning and reported in person to Sir Bradford Chichester.

"In order to do this," he said, "I give a dinner this evening at which Sir Bradford Chichester will be present. Have you costumes?"

"Everything except appropriate jewels. I shall provide a wealthy American widow—Mrs. Worthington Wood."

"Very well. I shall expect you at 8."

At the dinner given at the French embassy Mrs. Worthington Wood, who, though born of French parents, had lived the first fifteen years of her life in England, was taken in to dinner by Sir Bradford Chichester. She had heard that his family, though ancient, were not rich and that he would gladly make a wealthy wife. She manifested so much interest in seeing his country and in learning about its customs and some 300 miles from London, that he, thinking to benefit in the matter of a courtship—should he deem such desirable—arranged a house party to be held in his home until he could return to London. More money! What's to come?" Thus he tried to dismiss the master from his mind. But, oh, if he only had the key!

He went to sleep and tried to sleep. Sir Bradford would not sleep. Hearing a movement in his room, he awoke and struck a light. He was ashamed of himself for doing so, but he had to. This made him feel a trifle more comfortable toward morning he went to sleep.

He was awakened by his valet bringing hot water. After a glance at the floor, which was covered with evidence of his having tampered with the oven, dressed and went down to breakfast. A maid approached him and said:

"I took the hot water to Miss. Wood room 6. She didn't answer when I knocked. I went in. She isn't there."

Sir Bradford shuddered. Like lightning the thought dashed through his brain that the key of his safe had been left in the oven. He put his hand to his head and laid it on his heart. He had offered the letter $1000 if they would let him have it back.

"Twenty-four hours later the minister of foreign affairs in Paris received the care of Mme. Chapelier. He directed that she be once admitted.

"Well," he said, "I took the hot water to Miss. Wood room 6. She didn't answer when I knocked. I went in. She isn't there."

She handed him an item cut from a newspaper stating that Sir Bradford Chichester had sent to London for men who had failed and others who had succeeded.

He had offered the letter $1000 if they would let him have it back.

"That will do," said the minister. "Our treaty is on the way."

He drew her a check for $10,000 francs.

"Must have license."
