PLOWMAN'S DAWN

There is a glory of the day That city dwellers can not know, When night in stience, strais away.

When sunshine comes and shadows go The early plowman in the field Lifts up his eyes to coming morn, And reverently he stays his task And walches as the day is born.

The very trees seem how to sland More silently, as if in prayer, The tong of birds is husbed and atil There is a glory in the air.

He stands this moment aliently. His feet pressed deep into the sod The city dweller can not know Buch unity of man-and God. -Chester Holt Pulmer.
