LAMENT In youth the world seemed rich as

In age I'm cold. Perhaps growing old? For I am growing grey to-day! In youth I laughed with ringing

Each time I wake, life's huge mistakel

In youth the days were just sublime! 'In age I seem to count the time! Por skies are often grey to-day! In youth I thought the birds

But now, birds by and flowers die! In youth for Joy. I'd often run And gambol in the noon-day sun; Days now are dill, and eves of In youth, so shows to be ray.

I'd seldom any time to peay!

The now my lot to have forgot! In youth I knew-well, everything (An ignorance to youth doth cling) But with maturer years come fearal Perhans it's age-the book's last page Perhans I'm abler now to guage The why, and wherefore, than of yore
