It Pays to Advertise

BY H. IRVING KING O McClure Newspelpte Syndicate.

"BET you anything you like you don't dare to do it," said Albert Richards. "Lay you a hundred that I do. responded Henry Abbot. They had been discussing an "ad" in the 'personal column" of the evening rpaper stating that a "young widow, aged; thirty-live, desired the acquaintance of young man, with a view to matrimony. Widow had twenty thousand dollars of her own. Call at 35 West Twenty-something Street, 8 to 9 p. m. Strictly bustness-no triflers." At five minutes past wight Albert rang the doorbell of a brown-stone house in the street named in the "ad." Next door to it on one side was an office building apparently housing a multitude of small businesses. On the other side of the brown-stone mansion another office

plied: "Mr. Smith-John Smith."

Presently there appeared an exceedingly pretty young woman, who, if she was thirty-five, looked at least five years younger. "You came about the advertisement, Mr .- er-Smith?" she said in a calm, melodious voice which absolutely thrilled the adventurous . "Yes, Mrs .- er-?" "Camwell," said she, regarding him with a rather curious look. "I read your advertisement Mrs.

Comwell," went on Albert, "and am of the opinion that we mighter-come to some agreement." "I sincerely hope we may," replied the lady. "I have had trouble enough over the matter. Just what have you to propose?"

They talked for nearly an hour, not only of the building business, concerning which Albert did his best to conceal his ignorance, but of many other agreeable things. As he was leaving Miss Camwell said; "By the way, with regard to that advertisement-are you sure you got the right house?" "Absolutely," replied Albert.

"Because," said she with a curious twinkle in her eye, "I also read the papers-and there is a matrimonial agency in that office building next door. "Yes, he was invited to a housewarming party and he took along some kindling and a box of matches."

The pretty girl sat in the corner of the compartment next to her sweetheart, her little niece on her knee.

The train dashed into a tunnel, and suddenly the other pusengers heard the little girl exclaim: "Kes me, too, "Mavis," said Aunt Violet, quickly, "you should say. Kiss me twice. "Kies me two' to not good grammar."
