

DREAMS

Dreams are but interludes which Fancy makes. When merriment ceases, leaving this world of waking, a melody of "disappointed things." A host of cobblers and a court of king. Light fumes are merry, grocer times are sad; both are the reasonable soul run mad; And many monstrous forms in sleep we see. That in the were, nor are, nor ever can be. Sometimes forgotten things long and help; Dash forward in the brain and come to mind. The nurse's legends are for truth; And the man dreams but what the boy believed. Sometimes we but rehearse a former life; The night restores our actions done by day. As bound in sleep will open for their prey. In short, the (face of dreams is of a color, Chimeras all, and more absurd or less.

Lonesome

By WUBY DOUGLAS

"WHAT do you suppose that girl is looking at?"

Mrs. Henderson asked the question of her husband as they sat in their leisurely after-dinner stroll along Riverside drive.

Frank Henderson looked at the girl, she was standing in the green path of grass that lay between the drive and the river and she kept searching the sky as if for an airplane.

"Looks as if she expected to see shooting-stars or some fireworks," replied Henderson.

"She interests me. Let's sit down here and rest," suggested Mrs. Henderson.

They watched the girl who stood almost motionless against the fading pink of the Western sky. She wore an anxious and, at times, a wistful expression as she dropped her eyes from their search of the heavens. Whatever she looked for was not to be seen.

The girl, noticeably discouraged, was walking toward them. She twisted the leather handle of her bag and her step lagged. There were tears in her eyes which she tried to hide when she discovered the pair on the bench near the drinking fountain.

"I believe she's lonesome," said Mrs. Henderson.

"She's too pretty to be lonesome," scoffed the man.

Helen Taylor had heard the word lonesome at just the wrong time. Without quite knowing what she said or did, she turned to the couple.

"Don't you even have a moon-shine New York?" she asked, laughily.

"Moon? Why—yes, my dear," said Mrs. Henderson in her kindly tone.

"We—we sort of forget there is one though," the man added.

"Perhaps you'll think I'm crazy—but, oh, I'm so terribly lonesome that I thought I'd walk down to the river to hunt for the moon—just anything we have back home in Vermont."

A quality in the girl's voice went straight to the hearts of the strangers.

"Sit down," said Mrs. Henderson.

"We wondered what you were looking for."

"I know I'm silly, but the calendar said there would be a new moon on September 13 and I know that I should be in New York beginning to earn my own living and I—oh, I thought it would be wonderful! How little we appreciate home—when we have it!"

"How little we appreciate anything, young lady," said Henderson.

"Even your moon that you're looking for. I've seen the time when I could have danced all evening in the moonlight and didn't appreciate it. Now I'd give my hat for the wind and the enthusiasm."

"And the girl?" interrupted his wife.

Helen laughed. "He seems to have the latter," she said.

"Yes—that's right," said the husband, "even if we don't know what the moon comes up." He patted his wife's hand.

The three talked until it was dark and as they rose to go and walked out to the street a car came along the curb.

"Well, for the love of green apples, mother," said a gay young voice from behind the wheel. "We thought you and dad had eloped or been kidnapped."

"It was Helen Tom."

"How—we have had an adventure—your mother and I," said Henderson laughing.

"Yes," explained his mother.

"Tom, this is Miss Taylor, a young woman who is strange in New York."

The young people acknowledged the informal introduction and in a moment Helen found herself tucked into the back seat with Mrs. Henderson and being whisked through the avenue streets to her boarding place.

"Oh, I do feel so much better, Mrs. Henderson. You were surely sent by a kind fate to lift me out of my blue depths," said Helen as she said good-night.

"Tomorrow night at 8—sharp," said Mrs. Henderson as the girl left. They had invited her to dinner.

They had a simple dinner and Helen noticed that Tom ate bread with gravy on it just as her own brother did back home. It was a silly thing to notice, but Helen could not help it.

"Now then, if you'll hurry out to the river we'll find that moon for you," said Henderson after dinner.

"Not going to make Miss Taylor take that constitutional with you, are you?" asked Tom.

"As she likes," said the mother. Helen got her hat and, unexpectedly, Tom got his. "I'll go, if you don't mind," he said.

They found the baby silver moon and Helen smiled through her tears. "It is wonderful," she whispered, "wonderful!"

And Tom knew what she meant even though it was weeks before he dared to tell her that he, too, had found it an enchanting moon.

It isn't the 1930 who causes the majority of deaths and traffic accidents. It's the experienced driver who knows what to do with his hands but doesn't use his head.

Last year in Ontario, 97.5 per cent of drivers in fatal accidents had operating experience of one year or more, and non-fatal accidents the percentage was 97.2.

LLOYD D. DINGLE
Conservative Candidate for Halton County in the next Provincial Election, to be held on October 6th.

Burlington, Ont., August 30, 1937.

TO THE PEOPLE OF HALTON COUNTY—

In this my first letter to you in the present election campaign I intend to state my stand on the liquor question.

Under the Hignham administration there has come into existence a great number of beer parlours—more than 1500 in the Province of Ontario. I think a distinction should be made between: (1) those beer parlours which are carried on as a part of the usual hotel business, namely, that of providing accommodation for the travelling public, and (2) those which are not hotels in the usual sense but are operated merely for the purpose of collecting the profits from the sale of beer.

It is common knowledge that many beer parlours of the second class above referred to, sometimes called "mushroom" beer parlours carrying on business in the cities, particularly, but also in some of the rural counties, including parts of the County of Halton, are not respectable places of business, but are operated in a disgraceful way. Some of these "mushroom" beer parlours could more properly be called a "dive" than a beer parlour, and they are a reproach to all right-thinking persons regarding their stand on the liquor question.

I BELIEVE THAT IN EVERY PUBLIC QUESTION THE DETERMINING FACTOR SHOULD BE THE WELFARE OF THE PEOPLE. The policy of the Hignham Government on this question is found in the words of Mr. E. G. Odette, the Liquor Commissioner, who said: "It is my purpose to sell liquor to make a profit for the Government." This simply means that the present Government is in the liquor business, to sell all the liquor it can, to make all the profits it can, regardless of how much human suffering and misery may be the result.

If the Conservative Party is returned to power in this election you have the pledge of Mr. Howe, the leader of the Conservative Party, to do three things to improve the situation:

1. To remove political patronage from the granting of licenses for beer parlours.
2. To return to a policy of control by a responsible board free from political interference.
3. To close all "mushroom dives."

I agree entirely with Mr. Howe's stand on this question and if elected I will support him on this issue.

Yours Faithfully,
LLOYD D. DINGLE
Liberal-Conservative Candidate

BALINAFAD

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cogen of Charlton, North Carolina, called on Miss J. Eborill Sunday afternoon. Marguerite Kentner spent last week with friends in Postville and Osnagh. Two pretty deer were seen Sunday evening browsing peacefully on Mr. P. Higgins property on the 6th line. The August meeting of the W. M. B. was held at the home of Mrs. E. Vannatter. The meeting was well attended, and the roll call was answered with the best ways to spend Sunday. After the business part of the meeting an interesting talk on Mission Bands was given by Mrs. R. Eborill. Mrs. R. McNeary had charge of the study of the Disciple Simon. A duet by Mrs. (Rev.) Foreman and Miss A. Foreman was much appreciated by all. It was decided to postpone the Mission Band picnic till later on account of so much sickness. General items on the Watch Tower were given, after which the meeting closed with singing and prayer.

HONOURABLE EARL ROWE States His Party's Stand on Labor

The national policy of the Liberal-Conservative Party, Provincial and Dominion, for many years has been to create industry for the purpose of providing work and wages for labor and a profitable home market for the farmer; the lumberman and other primary producers. The Party's sympathetic attitude towards labor is evidenced by the Social legislation on our statute books.

The Liberal-Conservative Party believes that labor should receive a fair share of the fruits of industry and is entitled to organize in order to improve the lot of the worker as regards wages, hours, security in old age and all other conditions of industrial life. The Liberal-Conservative Party reaffirms its traditional policy of insisting upon the maintenance of law and order in all industrial disputes and pledges itself firmly and scrupulously to uphold the laws of Canada.

The Liberal-Conservative Party in Ontario stands for the following:

1. The right of employees to bargain collectively through their own representatives chosen without dictation, coercion or intimidation.
2. It is and has for many decades been a fact that both capital and labor are international in their organization. Accordingly the right of the worker to belong to the union of his choosing, Canadian or International, craft or industrial, is fully established; provided always that the unions must observe, and that capital must observe, in all their actions, the laws of Canada.
3. The Liberal-Conservative Party is unalterably opposed to the introduction into Ontario of all-down strikes, sabotage or other violations of our law, and for the purpose of clarity hereby places itself on record as being opposed to such illegalities whether they are introduced into Ontario by labor unions affiliated with the C. I. O., the A. F. of L., or any other organization, capital or labor.
4. That representatives from other countries, both of capital and labor, shall be subject on the same principles as other people to our immigration laws and that they shall when admitted to this country, strictly observe the laws of the land.
5. The primary function of the state in all industrial disputes is FIRST—to take no sides and to maintain law and order without the display of unnecessary or provocative force; and SECOND, to enact and impartially administer adequate legislation for the conciliation of industrial disputes.
6. The right to work in Canada is not dependent upon membership in any organization.
7. That no strike shall take place until all reasonable methods of conciliation are exhausted and the worker should have the right of secret ballot free from improper influence or coercion in all decisions relating to the dispute.
8. The Liberal-Conservative Party will continue in the future as in the past to defend the principle of freedom of association within the law. The party re-affirms its belief that the essence of democracy is trust in the people and to rely on freedom and not in dictatorship, that public opinion may be led but not driven and that the greatest safeguard of orderly progress and reform is the sound common sense of all classes of the Canadian people.

I have stated frankly and fearlessly my party's policy toward labor and law enforcement. I stand now, as always, for law and order, for all, under all circumstances. This policy is the democratic British method and I shall apply these principles in the administration of our provincial affairs.
