ACTON

Mr. J. M. McDonald and Mr. E. J. Hassard have both returned from their hunting trips and both have brought back their quota of deer.

A part of the Remembrance Day service in Acton in which the general public do not participate but is nevertheless of equal importance is that conducted annually by the Lakeside Chapter of the I.O.D.E. Each year this order visits Fairview and Dublin cemeteries. On the grave of each soldier who served his country in war time a Union Jack was placed. The fiftieth anniversary of Knud Women's Missionary Society was celebrated at the church here, Wednesday afternoon, at their annual thank-offering. Mrs. W. F. Gamble, President of the Guelph Presbyterial W. M. S., was guest speaker. About one hundred ladies were present. Miss Bella Stephenson visited friends in Toronto during the week. Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Dills and children spent the week end visiting in Toronto.

Mrs. Stuart Lantz entertained a number of girl friends of Miss Grace Lantz at a surprise birthday party at her home on Monday evening, when a very happy time was spent. Miss K. McDonald, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. H. Mainprize and other friends in Ontario for several weeks returned on Saturday to her home in Kindersley, Sask.—Free Press.

SPECIAL FARM COURSES PLANNED IN TWO COUNTIES

Special three-month courses in Agriculture and home economics sponsored by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, opened in Milton and Bolton for Peel and Halton County students on Tuesday. The courses will run for four weeks, following the opening day, and for eight weeks during January and February, to provide Christmas holidays for the students. The home economics course has been designed to instruct the student in the field of home and family life.

There is, just now, quite an argument on among those who study the brain and nerves, about worry. Surprising as it may seem, there are high authorities upon the subject who say a certain amount of worry is a good thing. This depends upon what is understood by worry. If it is a mere nervous anxiety, it is bad. If it is more or less calm effort to flourish out one's troubles and seek to find a remedy, it is, of course, a good thing.

The SNAPSHOT GUIDE

MAKE THE GOOD ONES BIG

Enlarging enables you to vary your print size. When you get a good shot like this, have it enlarged.

SUMMER is about over and by now you should have a drawer full of prints—pictures of week-end outings and the vacation tour, sunsets and maybe seashores, the family's young generation in sunbaths or bathing suits, capering about the lawn spray or digging furiously in a sandpile; all sorts of pictures rich with memories of a grand season.

The question now is—what are you going to do about them? Let them lie loose in the drawer where nobody will see them? Or, will you fix them up to be seen as pictures should be?

The least you can do is mount them in an album so they won't be lost. And if you have some really good ones, you might try your hand at a "summer book," edited just as the modern picture magazines are.

Have you ever studied these magazines and wondered why their pages are so interesting? Have you wondered why your own snapshots do not have the same snap and flash? It's really very simple—a matter of size as much as anything else. When an art editor gets a picture that is especially good, he trims it down to include just the part he wants. Then he has it enlarged and "splashed" it over a whole magazine page, maybe two pages. Other pictures, not as good, are used in smaller size and the big "splash" picture carries them along.

Start separating your pictures into related groups. One group, for instance, could be that grand shot of him, intent on pouring sand out of a bucket half as big as he is, with the sun making a golden halo about his head and his little mouth pursed in utter concentration. Don't keep it small, for then you can barely see the details that are so dear. "Splash" it over a whole album page. If you don't do your own enlarging, your photofinisher can do the work for you. Then take your other pictures of baby and sandpile and arrange them informally on the opposite album page.

With this method, you can produce layouts that have the real professional touch. Be hard-boiled in your editing. Don't be afraid to trim away parts of a picture. Use four strips of white card in planning the "trim" and shift them about like a frame over the picture until it is limited to just the part you want. Then have just that part enlarged. Nearly all good pictures are better for such trimming and it has brought many a dull photograph to life.
