FUTURE OF CONSERVATIVE PARTY IMPORTANT POLITICAL ISSUE

 pioneers of present day Canada, and the people of this country need have little fear that they will not be well served by the young men, raised in such an atmosphere who will take over the pilotage of the new service. There are now four planes, with a speed of about 180 miles an hour in the hands of the airways and more are on order and will be delivered within the next few months. In equipment of every kind and facilities available to the pilots and passengers the new airways will be quite up to any service operating in the United States. The planes being purchased are not of the latest type; they will have accommodation for up to eleven passengers—some planes carrying a smaller number. It was decided that planes of this size were suitable to our needs. When the Eastern section of the route will be in full operation is not certain, but the probabilities are that the line from Vancouver at least to Montreal will be in full swing before the end of next summer. It is possible that the coming year will see the line from the Pacific to the Atlantic complete.

One of the important features of the new line for the future is its projected cooperation with other lines to form an All-Red system about the world. Last summer tests were made across the Atlantic. This summer further tests will be made along the inauguration of a regular transatlantic service. This step-by-step the vision of a world-crossed by regular services is being realized. Mails from London will be carried to Vancouver in between two and three days. An interesting future development of the Trans-Canada service will probably be the inauguration across this country of the most direct route from Northern Europe to the Orient. This route will probably pass through Edmonton to Alaska and across Eastern Siberia. This way will have the advantage of passing over land, not the wide stretches of the Pacific, but nothing on this venture can be done until affairs become more settled in China and Japan.

CARD OF THANKS

To the Citizens of Georgetown:
 Kindly accept my sincere thanks for the splendid vote you gave me on Monday last when you elected me Reeve of Georgetown for a second term. In the future, as in the past, I shall endeavor to perform the duties of the office in the best interests of the community as a whole. I wish you all a very Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year.
 Sincerely,
 GEORGE DAVIS

Bedlington Terrier Is

Friendly and Good Guard
 The Bedlington Terrier is one of the many good things that come from Borthwickland, writes Maj. Clifford Eric in Answers Magazine. He was originally the long-legged (the Dundie Diamond being the short-legged) offspring of common stock that owed much to Skye terrier influence.

The difference in those days did not even remotely approximate to the difference existing between those two breeds today. Bedlingtons probably being nothing more than puppies that were "on the leggy side"; nevertheless, the leggy puppies and the low-ground puppies found separate admirers, and from these beginnings two distinct breeds were evolved.

Although the Bedlington (this name was conferred upon him in 1825) is recognized as a terrier, he boasts many points that in other terriers would be considered faults. Instead of being round, should be long and pointed like those of a hare, while his back, instead of being short and straight, should be long and arched.

But in origin, general conformation, and character, the Bedlington is essentially a terrier. Although he is obviously built for going to ground, he is an exceptional water dog, and he is game and hardy. This little dog with the "wavy" coat, firm yet soft in texture, is recommended as a loyal friend and an effective guard.

Monte Cristo's Prison

Is Paying Institution
 Although Edmond Dantes, daring scout of Monte Cristo, never existed except in the vivid imagination of his creator, Alexandre Dumas, the dark and gloomy Chateau d'If is real—unlike the rocky, forbidding island upon which it stands, asserts a writer in the Washington Post. It is real enough to bring good hard cash into the coffers of the French government, in the form of rent paid for the privilege of conducting the place as an attraction point.

The Chateau d'If had real flesh-and-blood prisoners in its time, but it is the imaginary Monte Cristo who brings sightseers to the little island, two miles southwest of Marseilles, France. To most of the visitors Dantes is real. They insist on visiting the cell where he is supposed to have languished; they want to set foot on the spot from which the future Monte Cristo of fabulous wealth was tossed into the sea tied up in a sack supposed to contain the dead body of the Abbe Faria—and obliging attendants point out these imaginary places.

Gulf's Not Salt Water Bodies

Contrary to general belief, the various gulfs of the Baltic sea are not salt water bodies. Through contact with the Atlantic the water is brackish, but the discharge of the numerous rivers into the gulfs keeps it sufficiently fresh to freeze as readily, or nearly so, as the Great Lakes, according to a writer in the Chicago Tribune. Again, the weather is much colder and ice flows or packs 20 to 30 feet in thickness are not uncommon. At times the prevailing northwest storms frequently force the cakes of ice one on top of the other until the harbor floor 25 feet below, is reached. Yet, this harbor formerly had a closed season as long as that of the Great Lakes.

Not Much Like Grapes

Grape fruit are not to eat, but they aren't a bit like grapes. They belong to the same family as oranges and lemons, just as you would expect. At one time the fruit were called shaddock, after the Captain Shaddock, who carried specimens of the tree from China to Florida. But that name wasn't thought attractive enough, and the growers sought another. They picked on grape fruit because these fruit hang in large grape-like bunches—unlike oranges and lemons which grow singly. There is a legend that the grape fruit was the forbidden fruit of the Garden of Eden.—Iverson's Weekly.

The Mythical Blacksmith

A curious example of the persistence of legends is that of the Cave of Wayland, the Smith in Berkshire, England. Wayland was a mythical blacksmith, yet for centuries and to within living memory, hundreds of men, feeling he was there invisibly, have left their horses at the cave's entrance, with twopenny on a rock, in the belief that if they withdrew for an hour, the animal would be found shod and the money gone upon their return.—Callier's Weekly.

A Bonnet Piece

A bonnet piece is a gold coin of James V of Scotland, so called on account of the king's head being decorated with a bonnet instead of a crown. James V was the first Scottish sovereign who placed dates on money and the first who diminished the size of the gold coins by increasing their thickness. In beauty of workmanship they approach the Roman coins. These bonnet pieces are among the most valued curiosities of the antiquary.
