THE NEWS

Somewhere within a head still in state.
Counting the notes which he has saved for years.
In all the headships of these dreary days
Nothing unusual to him appeared.

He was there in the ranks of Jim as a friend.
His head was money still in hand.
He has not lost what he refused to sell.
Of every kind of value he is sure.

His children to himself and come his end
And give to the rest he has in hand.
His head, but his his hand, hand and hand.
It was declared because the world was in hand.

Though thousands suffer, he is in hand
Though he has lost his head, he is in hand
Unhappy the man who has lost his head
Who robs himself his own law code to save.

I fancy I can see him standing
His hand on his head, his hand on his head
A poor, black, shining head of a man.
—Edgar A. Guest.

Historical Sketch of Union Presbyterian Church

From records of authentic records of the early days when the first settlers of Georgetown and the surrounding territory settled with the Union Presbyterian Church. It is a history of the church from its inception to the present time. It is a history of the church from its inception to the present time.

In those days when the people were few and far between, neighbors were neighbors, helping one another in times of need. It was a time when the church was the center of the community. It was a time when the church was the center of the community.

It was a time when the church was the center of the community. It was a time when the church was the center of the community. It was a time when the church was the center of the community.

Rev. W. MacDonald, D.D., Pastor since 1866

It was a time when the church was the center of the community. It was a time when the church was the center of the community. It was a time when the church was the center of the community.

From this date the congregation remained vacant for over a year, being supplied by students and visiting ministers. After a year, Rev. W. MacDonald was called and installed as pastor on August 4th, 1866. His pastorate continued until he accepted a call to Milton charge on Dec. 21, 1867. During his ministry the congregation made good progress. His work was blessed to many. He was equally of service as a preacher and pastor. His popularity was unbounded in his time.
