Cyclist Crashes Into Car

When attempting to make a left turn on to the old Dundas road from the Dundas highway at the high level bridge yesterday afternoon, Raymond Walker, 240 Runnymede road, failed to notice the approach of a motorcycle driven by Lex Schrag, of Brampton, who was proceeding to pass him, causing the motorcyclist to crash into the side of his car. Schrag was thrown from his motorcycle to the pavement but was able to get up and turn off the ignition of his machine. The driver of the car continued down the highway but was brought back to the scene by Leonard Mamble a truck driver of Brampton, who had pursued him. When questioned later as to why he had left the scene of the accident, Walker stated that he merely went further down the highway to turn his car around. The motorist removed nothing to St. Joseph's Hospital where an X-ray disclosed a dislocated shoulder and severe abrasions about the head. The case was investigated by P. C. Williams of the York Township police. No charge was laid against the driver.

A WOMAN'S OPINION OF MAN

The following, referring to that "brute called man" was written by Helen Rowland, the well-known writer of the country to the south of us. Do you agree with her ladies? We do!

"DID IT ever occur to you that inconsistency is written all over the female map? Also conceit, deceit, jealousy and hypocrisy? Man will always be the paragon of the animals—never that bone and hank of hair called WOMAN! Get wise to yourself, Woman! Are you jealous or something, because you were not born a man.

Believe it or not, the above is signed by a WOMAN! And it's genuine!

Jealous? Far worse than that! I'm positively ENVIOUS! Man is Nature's pet, and I envy him, not only because he gets all the breaks in life but for all those fortunate traits of temperament and character which makes him the darling of the gods.

I envy him his gorgeous, cast-iron stomach, which seems to be able to assimilate cheese, hot-dogs, pretzels, and lobster salad at any hour of the night—and to wash them down with libations that would drive a woman to a doctor.

I envy him his perfect equanimity, his nonchalance and his steady nerves. A woman worries about everything. But a man never worries about ANYTHING.

I envy his unquenchable optimism, his zest for adventure for everything—even his work. That's why men stay young longer than women.

I envy a man his immunity and freedom from all boredom, ranging threadbare little details and duties in life—which he can always find some WOMAN (a wife, a stenographer or a sister) to do FOR him.

Above all, I envy man his sublime self-confidence! His imperturbable SELF-COMPLACENCY! I'd give my right eye for just a spark, a scintilla, a few crumbs of it!

A woman is always wondering if "She'll DO." But, did you ever hear a man wondering if his hat was becoming or if his nose was shiny? Or ever hear of a MAN lying awake nights wondering if he had made a hit with a girl—or if she would call him up, next day? He may be modest, he may even be shy—but it's harder to find a man with genuine inferiority complex than it is to find a woman with a genuine complexion! No matter what he may see when he glances in the mirror, he always has a secret conviction that there is "that something" about him, which is attractive to the women. And he never doubts that he can win a woman's love—and never fears that he may lose it, no matter what he may do.

All I'm jealous, am I sore, because I was NOT born a man—to go through life blithely and light-heartedly free from all inhibitions and doubts, all social obligations and all domestic responsibilities? Oh yes, I ENVY a man—but my envy comes straight from the heart, and is born of my ADMIRATION for the Masculant Sex.

Not all the laws and all the mid-ermism or feminism in the world will ever make life as sweet and thrilling for a woman as Nature has made it for her MAN.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

New Cold Storage Plants

Two new cold storage warehouses are in course of erection in fruit-growing districts of Ontario. The Oxford Fruit Co-operative has begun work on a two-storey concrete and brick cold storage warehouse at Woodstock, which will cost $30,000. It will have a 18,000 barrel capacity and will be ready for the fall pack of apples. The Lambton Cold Storage Company is also erecting a two-storey building, which will have a capacity of 5,000 barrels storage with a large packing room in addition. It is located at Forest and will prove a boone to the fruit growers of that district. The cost is placed at $15,000.

"Rust" Disease

"The 'rust' disease that attacks outdoor flowers such as snapdragons and Mollyhock," said J. F. Clark, horticultural Assistant, Agricultural Societies Branch, "can be controlled by keeping the plants thoroughly dusted with sulphur. The spores of the fungi, which cause disease are killed when they come into contact with sulphur on the plants, thus preventing infection. Sulphur may also be used as a treatment for the control of black spot and mildew on roses.

"The tarnished plant bug is frequently destructive to the buds of dahlias and zinnias together with other flowering plants. Dust mixtures applied by means of a hand-blower are of value, especially tobacco dust. Hydrated lime when dusted on is proving beneficial."

Vegetable Crops

Discussing vegetable conditions in Ontario, George Nash, vegetable specialist, Horticultural Branch, said that the yield of early potatoes is considerably below that of last year, and that fair prices have caused many growers to market their crop early. A certain percentage of growers, however, are holding back in the hope of a greater yield, and believing that prices will remain at their present level.

Tomatoes have suffered to some extent with lateral blooms not setting so well. Staked tomatoes have given best results in fruit sets.

Beet and carrot crops are fair, and heavy plantings for late crops have been made.

Peas, both canning and market, are finished.

Cabbage crops have been good, with large supplies still available.

Late plantings in cabbage and cauliflower are large.

Potato Yields Decrease, Prices Materially Firm

Unlike other years, says C. W. Baker of the Ontario Growers' Markets Council, first plantings of potatoes have already been harvested, and supplies are now coming from later districts and second early plantings, which materially reduces available supplies. Yields have varied from twenty to fifty bags per acre as against sixty to seventy-five bags a year ago. Even though the yield is light, the sample is exceptionally good.

Unless growers become nervous the price should remain reasonably firm and, as to available supplies, it is doubtful if there are more than sufficient to carry the demand until the late crop is ready for harvesting.

Pasture for Pigs

Pasture for pigs may undoubtedly be made good use of on the average farm. This method of feeding, however has disadvantages, particularly with the active bacon hog, owing to the opportunity for excessive exercise from the standpoint of fast finishing and the liability of little pigs to stunting through sunburn and the combined effects of sunburn and dew. With plenty of skim milk or buttermilk, both the experimental evidence and that of practical feeders would indicate that growing bacon hogs may be fed for market more economically indoors or in well shaded pens, supplied with racks for green feed, preferably in the form of alfalfa or clover. Racks are essential to the prevention of waste.

Ontario Agriculture Well Represented at Regina

A very comprehensive picture of Ontario agriculture is being given to the visitors at the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference through the large educational exhibit that has been prepared by the Extension Department of O.A.C. for the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The display is 130 feet in length, and is divided into five units that show the most recent advances in poultry and hog production, and the latest developments in cereal and legume breeding that have been made in Ontario. These four panels are balanced about the central unit which provides a key to the whole scheme with the caption, "Ontario Agriculture: A Well balanced System, with Much Live Stock, and Regular Rotation of Crops."

The idea of crop rotations as the most important factor in the success of Ontario agriculture is also very forcibly presented in the central panel by means of an eight-foot wheat, which revolves slowly, showing in a very striking manner the crops and arrangement that go to make up a good rotation for Ontario.

Improving Alfalfa Yields

Reports from most of the 34 farm demonstration experiments conducted in 22 counties by the Department of Chemistry, O.A.C. are in. The figures bring out some interesting facts. 1933 growing season has been fairly favourable in many sections, but severe droughts have reduced yields to a considerable extent. Nevertheless, results of great interest remain. An application of fertilizers of 375 lbs. per acre in early spring resulted this year in an average increase of 1,326 lbs. green alfalfa per acre. This was 31.3% greater yield than that obtained from unfertilized alfalfa. The highest yielding fertiliser was again 0-12-12, which this year gave an average increase of 34.8% over unfertilized.

The average yield for the 321 farm fertiliser experiments on alfalfa conducted over the province during the past four years shows an average increase for fertilisers of 4,033 lbs. or 39.3%, and in addition valuable residual gain.

Three common analysis tested in all four years have given the following results: 0-12-5, 32.7% increase; 0-12-6 29.7% increase; 0-12-12, 40.5% increase. The cost of 375 lbs. of the fertilisers used ranges from $5.25 to $7.50 per acre.

The 1933 figuers again confirm the findings of the previous three years; high potash fertilisers pay best on alfalfa. Alfalfa being a legume, has the power to extract nitrogen from the air and fix it in the soil by virtue of the structure of its roots. It is logical, therefore, to interpret the figures given to mean that when the alfalfa crop is established, it can supply its own nitrogen, but that to benefits materially from the addition of phosphate, and especially potash.

Siam Exhibit at C.N.E.

Siam is another country that will show its wares at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. The Siamese government is making a specialty of rice culture. The display will be a most interesting and unique one.

White Strand on Her Temple

By JANNIS PARKER

BOB CURRAN, newspaper reporter, hurried as ever late that of the pale young man who lagged slowly beside him and they pushed further up Broadway's warm, crowded sidewalks.

"You know, you're a queer duck," Bob told his companion. "First you chatter mile after mile, then you lapse into dead silence."

The young man glanced at him and smiled a wry little smile. Then he turned from Bob's healthy, tanned face, and his light blue eyes fell on the electric lights of a vaudeville show. He stopped short and went even more pale as he read the electrically-outlined name, "Eve Langley."

"Just what your poetic soul needs, Carl," he announced. "A little excellent piano-playing. And Eve Langley's the girl who certainly knows her ivories. Let's go in."

"Please, Bob, let's not," entreated Carl. "I haven't felt any too well all day and that stuffy air in the the-ater . . ."

"Couldn't be any more stuffy than outside, could it?" demanded Bob purchasing the tickets. "There's not a wisp of air to be had. Besides, Eve is an old friend of mine and I didn't know she was in town."

The theater was darkening as they went in. Bob clapped loudly as Miss Langley, lovely in a black clinging gown, bowed gracefully. Her ebony hair had a single strand of milky white growing back from the temple.

"Pooch of a girl," Bob shouted to the silent Carl above the loud burst of applause that greeted Miss Langley. "And there's a story attached to the white strand in her hair. I'll tell you after her first number. Why, what's the matter, man? You look like a ghost!" He leaned nearer to Carl. "Listen, maybe I was wrong to drag you in here. It is kind of stuffy."

"No, no, I'm all right," quickly answered Carl, his voice husky, his eyes bright and riveted on Eve Langley.

Her hands fell on a succession of ringing chords that filled the hushed theater. Each note was bell like—passages of clear, colorful tones that almost melted away before the melody-note sang on, accompanied so easily in a whirl of light trills and arpeggios.

"Eve certainly plays," Bob was applauding loudly again as she bowed off the stage after her first selection. "And to think she's putting all her soul and feeling into it for that rag."

"What rag?" Carl wanted to know.

Bob began. "Some year and a half or so ago Eve was to have married Cyril Rogers, the playwright. Everyone knew who he was, but only through his works. He was a quiet, isolated sort of chap. And a poet, too, like you, Carl. All you poetry-making ducks are a moody lot. Well, anyway, they had some sort of scrap and he told her if she didn't write before a certain day he'd do himself in. Seems he'd seen her dining with a literary critic, a critic who hadn't been any too sparing in his criticism of Cyril's work. And then Cyril being insanely jealous in the bargain. . . . Well, she did write, but the mail was delayed or there was a hitch somewhere or other. Anyway, that was the end of Cyril."

"He did, then," murmured Carl.

"Did what then?" demanded Bob.

"Did himself in, as you put it."

Bob shrugged. "Maybe yes, maybe no. You artistic birds are apt to do anything."

"How did Miss Langley take it?" Carl's voice was so low Bob could hardly hear it.

"Well, she got that white streak in her hair and she hangs on to the idea he's floating around the world somewhere. That's why she went into vaudeville—figured if he saw her billed he'd come and hear her. She's really too good for vaudeville, ought to be doing concert work; but her only thought is to find Cyril and a vaudeville circuit covers a lot of territory." Bob became indignant. "Why didn't he let her know what he really did? It makes me boil, a fine girl like that wearing her life out trying to dig up some poetic bird who just went off into thin air. . . ."

"Maybe he thought she loved the literary critic. Why did she have lunch with him?" offered Carl.

Bob sputtered. "Ye gods, having lunch isn't a criminal offense! And she was probably trying to make the critic take more kindly to Cyril's work. She was always thinking of Cyril, and Cyril was always thinking of himself, too."

Carl was silent. Then, "Did you ever know this Cyril chap, Bob?"

Bob snorted. "No, thank heaven."

"But you really think she loves him? Are you sure?" Carl asked.

"Of course, you ninny. Say, what are you looking so dreamy about?"

But Carl had snatched his arm and was pulling him up the aisle just as another roar of applause greeted Miss Langley's reappearance.

"What the . . . ." exploded Bob.

Carl's eyes were gleaming, his face radiant. "I'm going to get some flowers and go back-stage," he whispered.

And so some five minutes later Bob jumped up to greet Eve but her eyes were fastened on Carl, her cheeks ashen.

"Cyril!" she exclaimed.

Bob stood cemented to the dressing-room floor. Then he seized the telephone and told the newspaper office that the long-missing Cyril Rogers had been found. And yes, everything was all right, he added as he glanced up at the couple beside him.

Here and There

Indications point to a fairly early harvest in Western Canada, says a late July weekly crop report of the Canadian Pacific Railway agricultural department. A few hotats in southern Manitoba, the report added, had already started cutting wheat and barley.

Canada jumped to fourth place in bacon exports to Great Britain last May as compared with sixth place in 1932, behind Denmark, Holland and Poland. Total exports to Great Britain from Canada in May were 8,566,600 lbs. or at the rate of 44,500,000 lbs. per annum.

There were increased retail sales in Canada in May as compared with April and the index number of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics rose from 83.7 to 88.6. Hardware had the best showing, the increase being from 78.8 to 111.9.

A spare blue-clad figure which to thousands of passengers through Vancouver in the past seven years represented a symbol of friendliness is a strange city will no more be seen around the wharves and terminals of the Canadian Pacific railway in the Coast city since Albert Charles Pearsall, terminal passenger agent for the company, died there recently.

With rising prices for wool and a vast Chinese market for wheat caused partly by advantageous monetary exchange, Australia is rising steadily to a greatly improved economic position, declared Warwick Fairfax, managing director of the Sydney Morning Herald, Australia's oldest newspaper, a traveller recently on the Canadian Australasian liner Niagara.

Meeting at a time when the nations of the world were never so much in need of close co-operation economically and politically, the fifth biennial conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations to be held at the Banff Springs Hotel, August 14-25, is regarded as a possible turning point in the affairs of all the nations bordering the Pacific.

Self-regulation of motion pictures by producers to conform with ordinary standards of decency will ultimately render boards of censors unnecessary, predicted Will H. Hays, Czar of Hollywood, interviewed recently at Vancouver where he arrived from a short stay at Banff and Lake Louise. Clark Gable was another movie star visitor at these famous mountain resorts.

All Ontario district brother officers of Norman M. McMillan, superintendent, Bruce Division, Canadian Pacific Railway, with H. C. Grout, general superintendent, as chairman, took part recently in a presentation to Mr. McMillan of a silver tea and coffee service, at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on the occasion of his promotion as assistant to H. J. Humphrey, general manager, eastern lines of the railway.

Unheralded, unrecognized and unexpected, Mrs Franklin D. Roosevelt, after an all day motor trip through French-Canadian country east of Quebec City, motored recently into the Ancient Capital and put up at the Chateau Frontenac. The wife of the President of the United States, the following day, took in the sights of Quebec from the high seat of a calleche, the quaint one-horse vehicles characteristic of Quebec City.

Mistress—What is in that huge bottle on the kitchen mantelpiece, Mary?

Maid—Oh, just some stuff for mending china, madam.

The shop assistant wrapped up the customer's parcel and deftly handed it to him.

"There you are, sir," he said, and if the goods are not just to your liking we will cheerfully refund the cash."

Farmer Giles sniffed.

"Don't ye tell me such a yarn young man," he replied.

"Eh? What?" exclaimed the assistant, momentarily taken off his guard.

"Ye might give me my money back," said the farmer, "but it ain't human nature to be cheerful about it."

The little island of Tobago, away down off the coast of South America increased its exports of limes sixfold as the result of an exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition last year. Needless to say, the lime growers will be back this year.
