

THE BETTER DAY

Hard thoughts, blind anger, and fierce hands. That kept this wretched world at strife...

Pride and hot envy and cold greed. The hankers of the latter will. What if ye triumph, and yet bleed?

Oh, shall there be no peace, no time. No freedom in a nother clime. Where men shall strive no more?

Where every motion of the heart Shall serve the spirit's master-call. Where will shall be the unseen part...

Or shall we but by this and please? Sink satisfied and cease to grieve. Find love but in the ruin of despair...

From Lyrics of Martin by Archibald Lampman.

HEARD TIMES THAT WERE MAND

From 1862 on during the Civil War in the South only way with the high cost of living...

The stout housewife which they produced, clothed, in time, almost everybody in the Confederacy...

The ingenuity of the Southern women was taxed to provide substitute for a thousand and one necessary articles...

Or shall we but by this and please? Sink satisfied and cease to grieve. Find love but in the ruin of despair...

From Lyrics of Martin by Archibald Lampman.
