Timothy Seed Production
Domestic production of timothy in Canada is still far short of demand. The yield of the seed and production of this crop may be encouraged. Timothy ordinarily yields from 300 to 300 pounds of seed per acre, and the cost of seed production averages about 6¢ cents per pound for the seed basis No. 1 grade, over the past three years. Canada uses annually about 100 million pounds of timothy seed and until 1931 some 8 million pounds of this was imported from the United States. Domestic production since 1931 has been limited to educational activities and the prospect of a large domestic market. As a result production increased from less than 100,000 pounds in 1931 to 5 million pounds in 1932, but declined to about 2,700,000 pounds in 1933 due to unfavourable weather conditions.

The Codling Moth has Not Been Wiped Out

Reports have been published recently to the effect that in Ontario apple orchards the codling moth population is increasing to disastrous numbers by the low winter temperatures. This is far from being the case in the Niagara district. An examination of the codling moth larvae (760) made in a Vineland orchard this week indicates that codling moth mortality is only in the neighborhood of 10 per cent. The reason for this, we suppose, where much colder temperatures were experienced, the mortality will run much higher, but we feel reasonably certain that in all cases where sufficient larvae will have survived in sheltered spots to necessitate the application of the sprays outlined in the Ontario calendar.

THE HEARTY SMILE

It's the smile that comes from the heart that counts. And means what it's meant to mean:

It's the smile up the class of a friendly hand.

And the joy in the eyes that glows;

It's the fuel to the fires of friendship too.

And the absence of "thin-veiled" grins.

Make you wish you had nothing to do but look.

In the light of a friendly smile.

The smile is a hearty thing—

A grinace that comes and goes.

When convenience calls it to do its

To cover an empty pose;

And the smile who would favors us.

With a smile like fading light.

If his smile is not with a negative nod.

By one who feels sure he is right.

Very many and varied are styles we

In the course of our daily task.

Each with a different thought behind.

Some a concealing mask.

Others a smiling face learned

That forms up all a part.

And others than heaven that mirror.

Or the soul.

And some from a kindly heart.

Oh, give me the man with a welcoming smile.

That spreads like a beacon light.

And let me take hawn from storms of

And the cold dreared shadows of night.

A promise of friendship! The pledge of

Oh, why can't more of us wear such a smile on one's face found birth in a heart.

Where the fire of love brightly burns.

If you have something pleasant to say about a person, you may not say it too emphatically, nor too often. If you have something to say that will add to the pleasure of the person, say it, but don't say it twice. If you have a conviction that life is a practical joke on unfortunate humanity, there is no special reason for telling it. If you are a gloomy and disillusioned yourself, Why should you try to destroy the hope and faith of others?

It is better to put into speech your own personal joys and interests, every courageous determination. The thoughts that sap the courage, drain away the ambition, and destroy hope had better never be spoken.

Mr. Chapman

The Inquiring One—I understand that your father is ill. I hope it is not serious.

The Late One—I hope not. The doctor says it is overwork.

Mr. Chapman

That first smile would relent; know that it is not.

Then duly, slowly, the rest of her soft accusation burned in.

His chin came up and the glint from his milky blue eyes was level. His voice was clear as he held out his hand.

Jimmy pitched his camp on the bleak mountain, where the icy blasts from the eternal snows on the rugged peaks of the Bolivian Cordillera still blow. The tent was set up, the fire built, the meal prepared, the bacon fried, the bacon fat melted into the oil of the lamp. Jimmy had a good appetite, but he had no money. He had to go without meat, but he had to eat.
