SPECIAL ACCOMMODATION FOR CHRISTMAS TRAVEL

Passenger Traffic Department of the Canadian National Railways that special tourist alsoping cars have been assigned to provide additional travel accommodiation between Eastern and Western Canada. The two points at which tourist sleepers are now being assembled are Montreal and Yoronto, and they will be operated on "The Continental Limited" as far west as additional tourist alsepers so early in the year for trans-continental service is in the nature of an innovation and was done with the idea of meeting. the extra demands made for this type of equipment during the holiday rush. By thus marshalling their tourist alcepers at an early date the Can-adian National Railways are obviating the necessity for tourist car passengers being forced to wait for their reservations and at the same time provide an economical type of transportation. As these tourist alsepers will make a return trip at the conclusion of each run, extra accommodation will likewise be offered to western Canada passengers travelling eastward for Christmas.

CANADIAN LUMBER FOR THE - UNITED KINGDOM

Extensive municipal housing schemes under way and projected throughout the United Kingdom brought to light the pronounced inshould materially help the Canadian lumber trade in that a great deal of material is required and will probably be drawn from the Dominion, stated H.—Coldsmith, representing Price and Pierce of London, England, who recently made a tour of Eastern Canadian National Railways. Canadian recently made a tour of Eastern Canadian exhibits were ham, recently made a tour of Eastern Canadian exhibits were ham, recently made a tour of Eastern Canadian exhibits were ham, recently made a tour of Eastern Canadian exhibits were ham, cheese, chilled poultry and geese, honey, maple sugar. A number of shipping to the British market, and conferring with Canadian National tributors were received at the Canadian officials. One Canadian company during the past summer exported over 80,000,000 feet of forest products animal feeding products such as from the Maritimes and Eastern Quebec to the British market. a definite change for the better in bim. His color was back. The speech was the topic of the family group of informed Bill it was ridiculous of him to feel as to did. Notudy eaperted orstory to a club speech. Bill Junier was quiet with some male understanding. "I'll get a Look on public speaking from the Lib for you, I'ad." he said to a way that did wonders to Bill's solf esteem, until bie daughter added: "one with gee tures," and as if this were not ensugh. "Illustrated, you know."

After that the days of the Morris family were practically devoted to ar ranging and promoting the details and readition of Bill's speech. It was his own idea that he try reciting some rhyma downstairs while Relia set upstairs listening to see if his voice car ried. It would be a gathering of hun-dreds of mas from the various dis-tricts and Bill felt, since he was going into it, he would like to be heard. Bill Junter's book from the library had many valuable hints but as Hill Senier read them to felt they were written for the really clover aftercotablished to the public eye, The beck struck panic in him. He wanted to leave town or be taken culdenty to the night of the club distar. The night of the distar Belle

As his hour approached, Mill, with through contries. Men with no terminal facilities whatever west es and on in saviable abandonment and the crowd of emokedated mes was practically insessible when it seared Hill's tura. Even Bill felt he was gradually becoming entirely numb.

He was enddenly electrified to bear his own same called and in the dis of fashie but polite applaces he rose and lifted his ores. After that he practically know no more. He had thought be was familiar with the good old phrasse-Lord knows he had recited them aften enough-but now be could remember nothing. He was conscious only of a swirling sea of faces. He looked about him a few times. He tried to swallow and femal it impossible. He recalled suddenly to was to introduce himself and make a brief speech of welcome. It must be done. He had to do it, to be put his head back and looked at the celling for inspiration. Every word he had prepared escaped capture. An atter halplessness selzed him. He took one long wise look at the volcane of faces and said loudly—so Hell could easily have beard had she been upstaire-

"Gentlemen-BILL MORRIS. Very pleased to meet you!" And then in trepidation over the sound of his own voice, he turned in a tarrible deliberation and sat down. There was a brief allease and then the crowd seemed to so mad. They cheered and applanted and those near him modded to Bill waggishly and pennded his shoulders. Some one was heard to say: "Neatest thing we ever heard, Bill. It takes you to think them an," and somewhere nearby be beard a remark that this was what made Bill such a big success in every way. He wasted so one's time. He always said the right thing. Good old Bill. When Bill could get to a telephone.

be called Bella. "Don't wait up, Balla. I've gat il over and I don't care when I get home now. Just wanted you to know they seemed to like it-"

"Like it?" she breathed ecstactically "Like it !" Then she sighed. Bill could hear her and it always meant something surprising. "They just went mad shout it, would be better. Bill, you're that clever and you won't ever helieve it of yourself. After this you'll rely on your own unusual phrases when you have to make a speech, won't

"Rure will," Bill agreed absently. A helated wonder struck him: "How did you know about it so soon?" "Why, why, you funny thing," Balla stuttered. "Didn't you know the dinner speaches were being broadcast? tiun't they tell you? You broadcast teautifully. Hill. Reautifully!"

It was then Bill realized how hard he had taken it. The mike and the mention of living on the air entirely tost on him. What a lot of unsuspected sensations there were left in the world.

He had been on the air for the first time. Helta was a great girl! A great PARMERS IN ENGLAND WANT CANADIAN FEED
