Hiding on the edge of the McKinsey Lane, the officers had only a few inhitutes to wait until Halls car, driven by McKinsey, pulled in. The two men were told to hold their Lands in the air by the officers, who had drawn their guna, and were taken out of the car. The officers had lowered their guna, and were taken out of the men when Constable Cookman says he aw Hall's hand strailing toward his left amplit. The officer snatched at Hall's hand, and struck him heavily on the chin. Investigation revealed a Secalibre revolver tucked into a shoulder holster inside Hall's coat. The gun was loaded, and further investigation revealed a second revolver and a shodgun also loaded, in the rear of the car. The second revolver was inside an overcoat, which ifall is said to have admitted belonged to him. The men were taken to Georgetown and Hall, placed in a line-up with several Georgetown men brought to-gether by Chief Marshall, was identified by C. W. Lambert of Crewson's Corners as the man who robbed him of $12 at revolver-point on the night of Dec. 6. Hall is said to have admitted by G. W.
