The phrase "Paying the piper while others call the tune" is a colloquialism dating back to the beginnings of the legend of the Pied Piper of Hamelin in the this teenth century. It means to bear the expense or loss of something from which others derive the benefit either voluntarily or by compulsion. Congreve used the phrase in a modified form in his play "Love for Love" in 1695. It was used by Platman in "Heraclitus Rideus" in 1681 in its present form. But an earlier use of the phrase can be traced to Mollers who spoke of "Paying the piper for others to dance" in his play "La Comtesse d'Escarbagnes." STEALING WATER FROM SEA An unexpected obstacle, it has been discovered, stands in the way of the realization of a scheme to provide Parisians with sea water bathing by constructing a pipe line between the Channel and the capital. This plan was submitted to the city authorities some time ago. There did not appear to be any serious practical objections to it. Alas! It has now been resized that the regulations of the Department of Customs make it quite impossible to remove water from the ses. This sounds less tastic, but an authority on this subject Sports girls taking part in official amateur competitions in New South Wales are to be disqualified in future if they do not wear stockings—and cotton stockings at that. ## "... So that Our Visitors will be Sorry to Leave"

"If we are going to invite people to this country, we must be honest with them . . . Courtesy costs nothing and is one of our greatest tourist assets . . . Let us so treat stra . gers within our gates that it will be easy for them to come, pleasant for them to stay, and difficult for them to leave."

Rt. Hon. R. B. BENNETT, From Minister of Canada, to the Consanada's tourist activities represent more than a great industry from which everybody benefits. They provide an opportunity to create what the Prime Minister has described as "that feeling of neighbourliness" which is such a vital factor in building up cordial relations within the family of nations. For both these reasons, may I urge upon the people of Canada the importance of showing consideration, courtesy and honesty to guests of our country? Let us all do those little acts of kindness which count for so much when one travels in a strange land. We have a beautiful country. We must keep it so. We want our visitors to travel highways free from disfigurement, walk the streets of cities that are orderly and clean, and find at the end of every day's travel an inviting spot to rest. Canadians should turn their attention wow to the important work of preparing for next year's tourist season. As a nation, we are advertising abroad the attractions of Canada as a holiday land. We must see to it that our guests return home with only the happiest recollections-and the determination to come back again and again.

Nor should we forget, in planning our own vacations, that there are beauties to discover and friendships to be made in our neighbouring provinces. We live in one of the world's most glorious playgrounds - let us learn to know better the rich variety of its travel attractions.
