The alarming feature of this attuation is the scarcity of farm help in a time when so many men are unamployed and relief expenditures have grown to such alagering figures. There are grounds for the auspicton that relief policies are destroying the order of young men and ruining them of life. It is had enough to burden the people with a load of debt and impair the nation's credit; but if relief expenditures go further and break down the morale of the country's young men, then some measure of economic reform cannot be introduced a day too soon.
