THE TWO PRAYERS

Last night my little boy confessed to And theesting at my knee he prayed with tears: "Dear God, Stake He a man Like Deddy who and strong; I know you can."

Then whilst he slept
I knot beside his bed,
Confessed my sins,
And prayed with low-howed head,
'O God, make his a child
Like my thild here—

Pure, suffelies, Trusting Thee with faith sincere."

DOGS IN MISTORY

From the early dawn of history

then pre-historio man first showered his affection upon the ancestors of the modern dog, the animal has al-ways found fondness in the hearts of man in all nations. Harodotus, the famous historian, explains the sanc-tity with which the dog was hald by the early Egyptians when he talls in his ancient accounts that the people of every Egyptian family in which a dog had died shaved themselves as an expression of mourning for their departed animal friend. The annual Boods of the NIL River were preceded by the appearance of the star, Sirius, in the heavens, and when the star was first seen each year, the Keyptian farmers moved their flocks to the safety of higher ground. Calling it their guard and protector, the ancient Egyptians associated it with the watchfulness and guardianakip of the dog, and as a result they worshiped the star and called it the dog-star—the guardian. In the earty history of Ethiopia, the inhabitants elected a dog as their king and worshipped it with all the said to be satisfied with the affairs of state, but when it growled, it was supposedly displeased with the mannar in which the government was being run, and amends were made immediately to correct the misdeads and wights the good favor of the royal Pythagoras believed that after life was ended, the soul passed on to other animals, and after the death of any of his followers, he held a dog close to the mouth of the dead man so that it might catch the departing spirit. There is no animal in all creation." the philosopher declared, "that could perpetuate man's virtues better."

THAT ESLINY PROBLEM

An instance in which a family had been able to pay all taxes due on proparty they owned, but unable to rake shough money to buy food, was brought to light by the Welfare Department of Orillia. Investigators found that the household had no food on Wednesday, one meal on Thursday and none on Friday. The mother of the family, when saked why are had not applied for relief, taid she understood relief was not allowed to people who paid their taxes. It is an example of what is soing on in many towns. People would be surprised if they could only learn tow some rateout the bare necessities of life in order to pay their taxes and keep their property clear of encumbrance. It is people such as these who must be considered, and to whom a saving of even a dollar or two in taxes means much in these days of stress-Manover Post.
