A MOTHER'S MYST

O God be praised for rumples boys
Who pluck me every day,
And make my hair turn gray,
Because for every silver lock
My heart has softer grown,
And nigh the furrows on my brow
Are seeds of patience sown.

O God be praised for muddy boots
That tramp the hall and stair,
For mouths to feed, for pants to patch,
For every trivial care,
Because in all my daily tasks
I see so plain and clear
The need God has, through them, for me,
And why he placed me here.

But most of all, I praise my God
For my tiny lips to kiss,
For loving arms that round me cling,
And fill my soul with bliss;
Because, though in a lonely way
I feel I'm living through,
Those same sweet hours of motherhood
That gentle Mary knew.

Just Five Minutes

By HELEN LANGWORTHY

OTHERS TODAY looked puzzled when a check came for a bill to the front of the Martin jewelry company and the check-off card stood idly in the window while the clerk occupied himself with the door handle. Other (11) took huge leaps across the sidewalk to open the door himself.

An attractive young woman met him with startled eyes, and a quick "Thank you so much," she murmured.

The store was deserted except for Mr. Martin and the check-off card over a counter. Mr. Martin hurried for the door to open it.

"I'd like to see some diamonds again," she said to the man behind the counter.

Mr. Martin glanced at the woman curiously. So many of his patrons nowadays were likely to wear just slightly outdated fashions. He noticed that this customer's fashionable coat and hat looked new, and especially so. Even the matching parasol with its elegant handle appeared to be new. Whereupon Mr. Martin placed his new expensive stock of diamonds on the counter.

A happy smile lit up the woman's face as she selected a ring with perhaps the largest stone of the display. He tried it on.

"You know," she smiled to a lucky view, "I made some money, very lawfully, and I decided to spend a diamond."

"I'm glad to hear that," Mr. Martin said, trying to appear nonchalant. He raised her hand to see the diamond closely. At that instant the clerk behind the counter stepped in to hit the door with a muffled bang. "These other rings," she said, "I would like to see one or two of them."

A worried frown came to Mr. Martin's face. He wanted desperately to sell the large diamond, but he was eyeing the clerk behind the counter as he spoke. Mr. Martin would have been more than ready to see the other side of the counter.

How, very carefully, the woman's left hand held down the handle of her parasol, down to the framework, and dropped the big diamond among the folds.

The instant that it dropped the woman said the other rings into a small pile.

"After all," she said, with a straight-forward smile, "I don't know which I would like best, but I'll take the one I return in an hour or two, when I have decided."

That had been almost too easy, she thought. There had been a question in her mind who could place the diamond in a pile. But now—five more previous minutes. She was about to say "Thank you," when she saw the clerk behind the counter. She saw him pick up the diamond and slip it into a certain bag. Their clothing was laid out. She knew too that even as she changed the clothes that would be changed they were in the same bag. But what of five minutes? The woman thought continuously. Leisurely she opened the bag, compared them. There was one that she liked better than the one she had seen. When she turned away from the counter it lay at the bottom of her parasol.

She heard herself murmur "Thank you," not today after all, (more she glanced at her watch. Slightly more than five minutes had elapsed while she had examined the bags. Her heart beat a little faster.

But still she talked pleasantly to Mr. Martin as she walked to the door, and then, involuntarily, she took a deep breath.

"Nice little rain," Mr. Martin said behind her.

"Nice little rain!" she thought. She hesitated with the door partly open when (11) came into the store. He was waiting broadly, "Just an April shower, only started five minutes ago," he said and then reached for her parasol. "Allow me—"

"No, oh, no," the woman said and her voice sounded strangely excited. "It doesn't work," she explained quickly.

Patrick O'Day would never have it known that as little a thing as a lady's parasol ever refused to yield to him.

"Oh, I can fix it," he said confidently and pulled the parasol by a few loops of its cord. He was holding the woman's hand as he pulled at it. Then the dull thud of a metal bag as it hit the sidewalk and the lighter thud of a diamond ring as it hit the floor.

"That's the diamond expression on this office face," Mr. Martin yelled hoarsely and Jim, the rat, pulling away from the curb, rearing down the street, alone!

GIFT AND THINK

Soon Canadians from Victoria to Halifax will be faced with the problem of making their ballots in the coming Federal election. The question naturally arises, "For whom shall I vote?"

There is just one fair answer to that question, so long as we adhere to the principle of democracy in Canada. That answer means work. Dig for the facts. Think.

Opinions flicker about everywhere in abundance, but facts are hard to track down. Unfortunately, they are easier to find than facts and truth. Rumors, too, and trifling and maliciously inspired untruths are all too plentiful at election times.

Digging for facts, and getting them means hard work. Serious thinking is even harder work. Figures are dry in themselves, but not when they tell the story of a nation of human beings made up of warm flesh and blood, having been saved from chaos of starvation.

Economic difficulties such as Canada and all the world face today will never be solved by outbursts of emotion. Intelligent men and women will be the better shop goods and more "voting" again the Government.

Intelligent men and women will be the better shop goods and more "voting" again the Government.

Gifted Family Retinues

Meeting at the home of Norman Giffen, Ontario, last week, descendants of Robert Giffen and their families, numbering 300, held their 25th reunion of the Giffen family.

Members came from Hamilton, Burlington, Alliston, Mount Forest, Toronto and Walkerton. Mrs. James Giffen, 77 years old, of Alliston, was the oldest member of the family present.

Family history, reviewed at the reunion, showed that Robert Giffen, weaver by trade, had left his home in Killbuck, Woodland, and came to Chingquacouy, Ontario, in 1813, bringing from Toronto to the Tullahoma district, where he secured employment. Later, he founded the family homestead on Lot 19, second concession east, Chingquacouy. Of his fourteen children, six were present at the picnic: Mrs. John McEwen, Mount Forest; Mrs. John McEwen, Mount Forest; Mrs. John McEwen, Mount Forest; Mrs. John McEwen, Mount Forest; Mrs. John McEwen, Mount Forest; Mrs. John McEwen, Mount Forest.

MY FRIEND

If I had known last night that I would have seen my friend again, that my good-night would be good-bye.

To him among the ways of men; I think I would have stopped and said those little words, "I love you," and to tell him all I felt for him, and how my life inside him under-stands.

How fine he was, how strong and true. How brave—unto the very end; but oh, his journey is so long. I cannot tell my friend.

COMMUNITY DAYS!

It is time the merchants and business men of Georgetown make and stage a "Better Days" campaign. The summer season is now at hand and the campaign of "Better Days" which has been or are now being held in other centres are meeting with a measure of success. It is some years since an event of this kind has been staged by the business community in Georgetown, and it steps were taken to organize for such an event. There is no doubt but that practically everyone in the town and district will be glad to see the project through.

The merchants and business men will put their honest effort into the scheme, we feel confident that the community will respond and will make the project worth while for all who participate in it.

And Now for the Summer Holidays

Now that the schools have closed for the summer holidays, and locks give place to bathing, boating and what not, no one would deny the youngsters all possible joy in the two months' recess. But so often a pleasant summer outing is marred by a severe accident or fatality that surely a word of caution is not amiss. Head and neck injuries are the most common and the most serious. Head and neck injuries are the most common and the most serious.

WHAT OTHERS SAY!

WAR is being declared by Quaker Park upon glaring headlights and police have been instructed by the Attorney-General to issue licenses of highways to make a close inspection of automobile headlights and other equipment such as dirty license plates, brakes, steering mechanisms, shield wires and the rearview mirror. Warnings are to be given in all cases, but failing to do so will invite prompt prosecution. The purpose of the campaign is to impress upon the individual motorist a sense of responsibility for safety and the need for personal co-operation. Care with mechanical defects are a menace to the general public and their gradual disappearance of the highways should be reflected in a decrease in the toll of accidents—Blasting News-Argus.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

During the month of June there were reported to the Workmen's Compensation Board 4,734 accidents, as compared with 4,374 during May, and 4,884 during the year ago. The total accidents numbered 23,000, of which 17 in May, and 29 in June.

The total benefits awarded in June amounted to $138,363.88, of which $45,530 was for compensation and $92,833.88 for medical aid.

This brings the total benefits awarded during the half year ending June 30 to $2,718,911.91, as compared with $2,061,043.26 during the corresponding period of 1934, and $1,438,419.71 in the second half of 1934.

During the first six months the accidents reported numbered 37,429, as compared with 35,018 for the same period last year and 29,714 for the last half of 1934.

The fatal accidents for the six months were: 1935, 130; first half 1934, 120; second half, 154.

The average daily benefits awarded during the half year were $118.15, and the average number of cheques issued, 650.

THE WORLD WHEAT SITUATION

At the present time the world wheat situation is governed by two important factors, namely (1) the volume of the old crop which will be required by importing countries before the new crop is ready for export, and (2) the development of new crops in the United States and in Europe.

Interest in the 1935 production, says the monthly review by the Agricultural Branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics dated June 21, now centers around wheat crops in various parts of the world.

While it is too early to indicate yields, the outlook is generally favourable as experienced before the grain has ready for market, there are several general observations that may be made, based upon developments up to the present time. In the first place, there is evidence that Europe is not going to harvest a better than an average yield per acre and there is little prospect of a recurrence of the phenomenal harvests of 1932.

The cool weather experienced in North America during the month of May was also prevalent in Europe, and frost being reported in central and northern countries. Adverse reports are being received from Spain, Portugal, and southern Italy, while crop conditions in France and Poland are very favourable as they were a year ago. In North Africa, compared with a year ago, there will be a substantial reduction in the yield, the most important losses being reported from Morocco.
