Leonard; secretary-treasurer, Mayor Syer; delegates to convention in Toronto, Mayor Syer and Mrs. N. A. Sinclair. Balance in bank at end of last year, $40. Membership is now 94. GASOLINE TAX REVENUE

Gasoline consumption for all purposes amounted to 624,144,804 gallons for all Canada in 1936. Ontario accounted for more than 45 per cent. of the total with a consumption of 282,827,724 gallons. Gasoline tax paid in the Province, at six cents a gallon, yielded $18,049,857 to the provincial treasury, which would indicate that approximately 6.5 per cent. of the gasoline consumed in Ontario is subject to taxation.

"The Ottawa Spotlight"

By Spectator

Ottawa, Feb. 1.—The speech from the Throne with which every session of parliament is opened gives a general survey of the legislation which the government proposes to bring in during the session. It also touches on general conditions in the country, but it makes no attempt to cover completely the work of parliament. It is a sign post indicating the road along which the government and parliament will travel. Many bills which will be presented to parliament have not yet been drafted, and events transpiring while the session is on will doubtless raise issues and bring about legislation not contemplated at the opening of the session.

It is therefore only in a general way that the speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor General at the beginning of the present session forecasts the course of the work of parliament during the next few months. In regard to social legislation it is clear that the government hopes to secure an early approval by the provinces of the amendment to the constitution which will allow parliament to pass its unemployment insurance measure. Whether such approval will be forthcoming it is for the future to disclose. At the moment the chances do not seem very bright.

A good deal of space was given to the work of the Royal Commission on Dominion Provincial Relations, which is examining the economic and financial basis of federation and the distribution of legislative powers "in the light of the new conditions which have arisen in the past seven years." It was stated that the stressed strains which economic and social development since confederation have placed on Canada's governmental structure "have disclosed the necessity for adjustments which will enable it to more effectively to serve provincial and national needs and to combine and preserve Canadian unity." The Commission will continue for some months to gather the necessary information; it will then issue its report with recommendations and then will be in the hands of "appropriate authorities" to decide what should be done.

The statement in the speech that arrangements are being completed for the inauguration of a national trans-Canada air service refers to the airports which have been constructed throughout the Dominion, which has already been making trial flights in the West and which in the coming summer will doubtless reach Montreal as standardized services. It is a gigantic undertaking but it will place Canada definitely on the air lines of the world, and will link with the trans-atlantic services coming into operation before the end of 1940.

The Transport department will sponsor legislation to extend the authority of the board of railway commissioners. Last session an endeavor to create a transport board out of the railway commission was defeated. In the session this year changes in the original bill will be made to remove objections that arose last session. One of the cardinal features of the original bill was to bring other forms of transport under some degree of control, the railways being the only form at present regulated under the board of railway commissioners.

Considerable interest will be aroused when the legislation "with a view to furthering the principle of parliamentary control of the export of power" is introduced. This question of power export, it will be remembered was the occasion of a lively exchange of views between the prime minister of the Dominion and the premier of Ontario.

Gratification was expressed at the substantial economic advance of Canada at the increase in revenues, the expansion in trade, the increase in employment and the decrease in the numbers receiving unemployment assistance. On the other hand in the minds of legislators there must be some anxiety over conditions in the United States and the possible effect these may have on Canadian industry if they do not soon improve.

The country will wait with interest the terms of the new treaty between Canada and the United States, which the speech said is in process of negotiation. It will be very much interested in the trade agreement which will be concluded between the United Kingdom and the United States. Eastern as well as Western Canada will have been pleased to learn that the activities of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act will continue. The work already done under the terms of this act has merited more credit and publicity than it has received. The expansion promised in the efforts to train unemployed young people will also meet with general approval.

The Canadian people share with the government its anxiety over the international situation, and will view with sympathy the efforts which the speech stated the government has made, where opportunity offered, to promote international understanding and goodwill. They will also be in full accord with the statement that "The government is convinced that in seeking to co-operate with the United Kingdom and other countries in efforts to promote international trade, it is pursuing one of the most effective means of ensuring economic security and progress in Canada and the betterment of conditions in other parts of the world."

HIGHWAY BRING TOURISTS

About $255,000,000. It is estimated, was spent by tourists visiting Canada in 1936 and it is probable that the estimate for 1937 will show an even larger tourist expenditure. Approximately 62.5 per cent. of this expenditure, or $158,475,000, came from automobile tourists and was thus directly attributable to the good highways that Canadian motorists have built with their tax contributions to provincial governments.

"I say, waiter, the flowers on this table are artificial, aren't they?"
"Yes, sir. That's the worst I've ever run up a vegetarian restaurant—if we use real flowers, the customers eat them."
