 Gilbert-Haines
 St. Alban's Church, Glen Williams, was the scene of a charming wedding on Saturday last, when Miss Mary Haines, daughter of Mrs. Jane Haines of Glen Williams, became the bride of John Gilbert, son of Mrs. Garfield Gilbert, Rev. W. G. O. Thompson officiating. The church was decorated with iris and carnations. The bride gave in marriage by her brother, Roland Haines, wore a flowing gown of baby blue Parma velvet, with tiny pink period cap and veil, and a bouquet of pink roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. P. O'Donovan, a matron of honor, wearing a similar costume in pale green taffeta with yellow accessories and flowers, and Miss Marjorie Haines, bridesmaid, in pale pink and periwinkle blue. The groom was supported by his brother, Garfield. A reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Haines, wearing a gown of printed sheer crepe, assisted by Mrs. Gilbert, who wore maroon velvet with white hat and gloves. After a motor home-coming through Northern New York State, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert will make their home in Glen Williams.
 How Far is it From "Bad" to "Worse"?
 At a certain church a beautiful high-gate was put up, and over it was inscribed:
 "This is the Gate of Heaven"
 While the paint was wet a large printed notice was attached with the words:
 "Please Go Round The Other Way."
