The SNAPSHOT GUILD

PICTURES WITH WEAK LIGHT

Hard to take? Not a box camera gets it with a 4-second exposure. Other cameras, 1 second at f.8. Exposure is short because the light is near her face.

IT IS surprising how little light is needed to make a picture if the light is placed close to the subject. For instance, look at the snapshot above. The only light is the weak little electric candle lamp, held about a foot from the child's face. With the lamp at that distance, a box camera loaded with super-sensitive film can get the picture with a four-second time exposure. Lamp two feet from her, exposure would be sixteen seconds—four times as long. Lamp three feet away, exposure is thirty-six seconds—nine times as long.

Reason: When light is close up, it is concentrated on a small area. Farther away, the same amount of light spreads over a much larger area, and your subject gets very little of it.

The distance between the light and the camera doesn't matter. It's the distance from light to subject that counts.

To take a picture like the one above, use a frosted white bulb, and have it as near the center of the picture as possible. Such pictures are worth trying. Sometimes you may not be able to produce any positive evidence that he used the words before "Solitude" appeared in the Sun.

John van Guilder

If this table 4 seconds... This will take 16 seconds... And this will take 36 seconds because light comes 9 times as much. See below.

At 1 foot distance, light is concentrated on small area. At 3 feet, same light comes 1/9 area, exposure is 4 times as long. At 9 feet, light comes 1/81 area, exposure is 9 times as long, and so on.

Place the light to subject, the less exposure required. (Distance from subject doesn't matter.) If your indoor pictures are coming out by using more light, have bulbs closer to subject, or give longer exposures.

Knighting Roast of Beef

"Sir Loin," an Old Story

Dr. Johnson, as lexicographer, gave credence and currency to the etymological nonsense, and subsequent compilers of dictionaries repeated the story that an English king knighted a roast of beef as "Sir Loin," and that is the origin of the name sirloin for a certain cut of meat, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Later authors, however, repudiated this popular tradition of a silly freak or pun of James I or Charles II, as of no etymological value, and agreed that sirloin, which appears in Dr. Johnson's dictionary for the first time with this orthography, is derived from the French surlonge, that is, "upper loin."

In the old English dictionaries the English word was spelled surlon. Skeat's Etymological Dictionary, vocabulates the word thus: "Sirloin, an inferior spelling of surlon." It adds that the word is "frequently spelled sirloin, owing to a fable that the loin of beef was knighted by one of our kings in a fit of good humor."

The king was imagined to be the merry monarch Charles II, though it is sometimes said to have been James I. Both stories are discredited by the use of the original French spelling in the Fourteenth century.

Swift is one source of the legend. In "Polite Conversation" he wrote: "But pray, why is it called a sirloin? Why you must know that our King James I, who loved good eating, being invited to dinner by one of his nobles, and seeing a large loin of beef at his table, he drew out his sword and in a frolic knighted it."

Many Sharks Are Found to Be Harmless to Man

For centuries the long gray fish, the shark, has been universally feared and hated as an unclean scavenger, a savage and voracious man-eater, a veritable tiger of the sea. In many cases this sinister reputation has been entirely undeserved, writes an authority in the Portland Oregonian, for of all the many kinds of sharks that are known to science only one or two are dangerous to human life.

The little dogfish that often starts a panic along the Atlantic bathing beaches is perfectly harmless, and even the tremendous rhinodon, or whale shark, that reaches a length of over 70 feet, feeds exclusively on minute water organisms and would never attack a man.

Shark leather, also known as sharkskin, has a beautiful natural grain and is so indestructible that it was formerly used by carpenters much as sandpaper is used. Shark-liver oil is said to be just as full of vitamins and just as unpleasant to taste as the better known product derived from the humble codfish. Shark fin soup is esteemed by the Chinese as a great delicacy; and shark meat meal is the richest known substance in protein content. In short when you get to know him, the shark is quite a useful member of society, and every part of the big fish is utilized in some way.

Lines From "Solitude"

"Laugh and the world laughs with you. Weep and you weep alone," are lines from "Solitude," a poem written by Ella Wheeler Wilcox. It was first printed in the New York Sun on February 25, 1883. Authorship for the poem was also claimed by Col. John A. Joyce, who had the quotation inscribed on his tombstone in Oak Hill cemetery, Washington, D. C., before his death in 1915. And occasionally echoes of the controversy are still heard, but there is little doubt that Mrs. Wilcox was the author, says a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Joyce was not able to produce any positive evidence that he used the words before "Solitude" appeared in the Sun.

The Early Jazz Bands

By 1915 there were bands in New Orleans playing what was first known as jazz. Late that year Joseph Gorham discovered and took to Chicago one of these which achieved fame there as Brown's Band from Dixieland. Bert Kelly, another manager, in the same year bestowed the name jazz bands on his numerous orchestras. In 1916 Brown's Band invaded New York. In 1917 the Dixieland Jazz Band from New Orleans made a phonograph record of the "Livery Stable Blues" and Jim Europe, a Negro entertainer, as an A. E. F. bandmaster, introduced it to Europe.

Lord Mayorship in England

The lord mayorship in England was created in 1189, and many of the privileges and prerogatives of the office date from the Middle Ages. The "Cinderella" coach in which the mayor rides through the streets when inaugurated is itself a heritage of former times. Built in 1757, it is adorned with cupids, dragons, flowers, and civic emblems, while the head of Father Thames graces it. Its painted panels are insured for $50,000.
