Frequently the veterinary surgeon's immediate presence and advice will save cattle—and protect a farmer's capital against the inroads of disease, accident or other emergency. Quick help is the farmer's only defense against these things. The telephone brings help immediately. Without a telephone a farmer runs constant risk. A telephone is insurance at low cost.

Sale of Tweddle 2 week old Chicks

The Kind that Live and Grow into Profitable Layers

Grade A—Barré Rocks and New Hampshire Reds $12.95, pullets $11.40, cockerels $10.00, Leghorn pullets $25.00. Extra-Profit chicks hatched from 25 to 30 ounce eggs, add $1.00 per hundred. Special mating add $2.50. 3 Week Old add $3.00. 10 Day Old deduct $1.00.

Walter Gormie, Mrs. J. P. Bosworth, Mr. Ellis, Ezra Thur, Mrs. Tutin, Harold Anderson, all living within a radius of 5 miles of Fergus, purchased a total of 2675 two and three week old chicks two weeks ago. Their total loss out of 2675 was 17 and they have now 55 more chicks than they paid for. This we think, is the best proof that TWEDDLE CHICKS do live and grow into profitable producers in the hands of our customers. Seeing is believing. Come and see these chicks for yourself and come at once, as our supply is limited.

AS RUTH AVERY turned to open the cottage door, she heard a low voice call through the dusk from the walk:

"Hello, Ruth!"

Only one voice in the world could put that tender cadence into her name, and he was half the continent away, but the voice spoke again, a firm step sounded on the path, and then he stood before her.

"Why, Bruce, is it really you?" she asked faintly, remembering strangely that it was just such a velvet southern dusk she had let him kiss her, two years before—a kiss he had forgotten after he went away to his western work.

Inside the house, under the mellow light, he looked his old, handsome self, a bit broader and thicker of stature. His blue, smiling eyes appraised her.

"Ruth, you have grown prettier than ever!" he said in his direct way.

She colored a bit, and turned the conversation: "Are you here for long?"

"Just for a week—wanted to see the old town—and see you."

She caught herself. Why was it that his voice could stir her so, when she had thought she had forgotten?

After he had gone, she went to her bedroom window that looked on the lovely garden that her father cherished. She mused over the happy days when he wooed her, or seemed to, winning her until she gave him her lips—and then he had gone, writing once in a long while that grew longer until his letters ceased. That kiss to her it had almost seemed the engagement kiss.

He came the next day and persuaded her to go on a drive to some of their old haunts. She tried to hide her happiness at being with him, but she felt that she had failed.

One evening, later in the week, they lingered in the little summer-house in the garden; and felt all the magic of the southern night. Then he gently put his arms about her and laid his lips upon hers, unresisting.

"Oh, Merton, I don't—you must not do that again!" she said, as coldly as she could. "Please remember."

After the sharpness of her rebuke, she thought that he would not come again, yet, even as she scolded herself, she hoped he would, if only to see that she was mistress of herself and no longer at his mercy.

He did come, on his last evening, his firm, even stride echoing in her heart as he came up the gravel walk.

She greeted him smilingly but quietly, chatted with him of their common interests and his work, and she saw his boyish impulsiveness slowly withdraw.

At the end she went with him to the door, composed and serene.

She held out her hand. He took it, paused, and she lifted her eyes to his. Suddenly she felt his arms go about her and draw her to him until the embrace was crushing.

"Oh, Ruth, I can't go on this way! I came clear back to tell you."

Her own thoughts in turmoil, she broke in. "Don't, Merton, I know—you want to play with me just as you used to!"

His arms relaxed. "Play with you?" She saw lines of strength emerge on his face. "Ruth, I never played with you. Off in that mining camp I've dreamed of you and that last kiss. I thought you understood. I was careless about the letters, I know, but it's my way. I've thought that you were playing with me this time, to get even for the other time!"

"I tell you I love you. I should have said it long ago, but I was afraid I might fall in the West, and then—"

"Then tell me, now, for—oh, Merton, I do love you and always shall!"

STEWARTTOWN
(Too late for Last Issue)

The Esqueving Women's Institute at their meeting last week entertained the Ashgrove Branch. Mrs. Gamble of Acton was guest speaker. Mrs. DeVries of Esqueving, and Mrs. Gordon Brown of Norval gave pleasure with their solos.

Mrs. H. P. Lawson gave a paper on decorating a girl's room. Mrs. Joseph Hunter told of the Mothercraft Society and its benefits to mothers and children. Mrs. Hunter also gave a reading "Flowers for the Living." The roll call was answered with "My one superstition," or a funny scrape. After four o'clock Miss Wilson the teacher at Stewarttown school, brought in ten of her pupils who sang very nicely the two songs they sang at Bronie last week. Leona Smith sang two solos which were much enjoyed. Lunch was served by the Esqueving Branch.

Mrs. Bailey spent Good Friday in Toronto with her sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Bally of Toronto, and Mr. Norman Bally of Meaford were home over the week end.

Other visitors for the Easter holidays were: Miss Ruby Tennant of Streetsville, Miss Frances Jenkinson of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jenkinson and son Herbie of Mount Dennis.

Mrs. Mortum of Toronto is visiting her daughter Mrs. W. Humphries.

Misses Mary and Helen Willet of Glen Williams spent the holidays with Mrs. Cecil Smith.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Standish on the birth of a little son.

A certain club had replaced its black-coated male staff with young, and in some cases, pretty waitresses. One day a member who had been strongly opposed to the change arrived at the club for lunch.

"How's the duck?" he asked an attractive waitress, rather gruffly.

"Oh, I'm fine," she replied rather perkily. "And how's the old pelican himself?"

Corporal (to soldier reporting sick): "What's the matter with you?"
Tommy Atkins: Pain in my h'ad domain.
Corporal: "H'adomen be 'anged! Stomick, you mean. It's h'only h'officers as 'as h'adomena."

Two men were hotly discussing the merits of a book. Finally, one of them said to the other:

First—"No, Friend, you won't appreciate it. You never wrote a book yourself."

Second—"No, and I never laid an egg, but I'm a better judge of an omelet than any hen in the country." Give 'em While They can Smell 'em
