Georgetown Runners Gaining Prominence

ROY FOULIS WINS U.T.S. SENIOR RUN

Roy Foulis of Georgetown, was successful in winning the annual cross-country senior division of the University of Toronto Schools by a wide margin on Friday afternoon last. The race was held over the High Park course on Friday evening, May 20th, in the town hall.

Mr. Ed. Kopas, past president of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association, will be present and address the meeting. Mr. Kopas is very anxious that Georgetown should again be represented in lacrosse in Ontario, and feels sure two well-balanced teams can be fielded here.

Action and Milton have already entered teams and it is expected Guelph will also have a team and all prospective players and lend your support for a good sport in a good town.

MORE MONEY NEEDED FOR SPORT

Speaking at a complimentary banquet tendered the Elora Rocks, Intermediate B hockey champions last week, P. J. Mulqueen, Chairman of the Ontario Athletic Association, made an appeal for greater financial assistance toward the development of sport in Ontario.

"Why do they vote hundreds of thousands of dollars for the development of live stock and refuse to vote even a limited small amount for the youth of the country?" he said. "In their minds I wonder which is more important, the development of a bull or of a boy."

SPORT SHOTS

With indications pointing to warmer weather by Victoria Day, scores of local baseball fans will be spending the holiday at the park watching the Georgetown team take on the Milton club in the first game of the season here.

The boys have been doing some spring training, but the weather has been rather inclement, and the diamond has not been put in proper shape yet.

Get your tickets for the lucky number draw for eighteen valuable prizes from plays or executive members.

The local baseball team open the season for Oakville on Saturday afternoon. It is expected a number from here will accompany the team to the lakeshore town.

Northern news states Gordon Alcott is "warming up" with the Copper Cliff seniors, and is expected to make the team as he is the only "south-paw" in their ranks.

Oakville will have a strong club this year, as Don Galbraith, Clifford 1st and Norman Carter, the three players who played in England last summer are lining up with the home team this season. Don Galbraith is rated as a good man on the mound.

It is time the Softball League was re-organized for the summer season. Many exciting games took place last year.

Let's have a revival of the grand old game—lacrosse—in Georgetown. See you at the meeting in the town hall Friday night.

HYDRO MAKING WORTHWHILE OFFER

In order to encourage the use of electric ranges in Georgetown the local Hydro Commission will allow $20.00 on necessary wiring charge for a three-wire service to the consumer. This will be a great saving to those installing electric ranges. Members of the Commission or local merchants will be glad to give full particulars of the great Hydro Thrift Plan at present under way. The attention of all interested is directed to the display advertisements which will appear in The Herald. Also listen in on Hydro's "Cooking School of the Air" over a province-wide hook-up every Wednesday morning at 11.15 (Daylight Saving Time), which will be conducted by Ann Adam, an outstanding expert in cooking school demonstrations.

WILLYS-ENGINEER CITES ECONOMY REQUISITES

"Few motorists give sufficient attention to all of the features of motor car design and operation which contribute to economy," says Delmar G. Willys, vice-president in charge of engineering for Willys motor cars. "The usual automobile owner looks at the mileage he is getting from a gallon of gasoline and considers that the answer to any questions he may have as to the cost of running his car."

"Fuel consumption is a major item and the one which makes the most continual drain on the pocket-book, but it is only one of several elements of cost that represent maintenance expense."

"The four most important items are cost for fuel, lubricating oil, tire wear and mechanical up-keep."

"Simplicity in mechanical design is a fundamental requirement of low mechanical up-keep expense. This is true in all types of engineering design."

"All surveys of automobile operating expense reveal that as complication multiplies, expense goes up."

"The motorist of today is justified in expecting high mileage from the fuel used and the general experience of Willys owners points to a fuel expense of around six-tenths of a cent a mile."

"Cost for engine oil is also low because of the type of design used in the Willys power plant and the effectiveness of control of oil consumption."

"Tires on Willys cars are 5 1/2 inches in cross section, the important dimensions in long tire life."

"The weight carried by the tires is proportionately small."

"These three elements, combined with the simplicity in construction of the Willys, are the contributing reasons why the Willys has achieved a world-wide reputation for outstanding economy."

United Church Will Observe 200th Anniversary of John Wesley's Conversion

Special Address will be Delivered in the Morning on the Life of John Wesley—Choral Service in the Evening.

Georgetown United Church will join with the other United and Methodist churches throughout Canada and the world in the celebration of the 200th Anniversary of the Conversion of John Wesley. This was an outstanding period in the religious life of not only England at that time, but of the entire world. It is said of John Wesley that he changed "the face of England."

Next Sunday, morning, at 11 a.m., Rev. F. C. Overend will deliver an anniversary address, while in the evening—favorite hymns of the late John Wesley and some written by Charles Wesley, will be sung. Large congregations are expected.

The following interesting article regarding this great event in the history of the Christian Church, is taken from the Globe and Mail, and written by J. M. Wilkinson, B.A.

"May 24, 1738, is a day to be remembered by the Christian Church, for on it was born the greatest Protestant Church in America, while its great founder was being reborn at a little Moravian prayer meeting in Aldersgate Street, London. Quoting from John Wesley's Journal, he writes: "After many doubts and temptations, I went, on May 24, to a Moravian meeting in Aldersgate Street, where one was reading Luther's Preface to the Epistle to the Romans." Here I found that rest of soul for which I had sought so long. I felt my heart strangely warmed. I trusted in Christ alone for salvation." Wesley and Methodism are inseparable.

The event will be celebrated this year by millions of Wesley's followers throughout the world, and it is to be hoped that Canada, divorced from Methodist Fellowship, will take part in the world-wide celebration. Added interest will be given to it by two notable unions of the great Methodist family—union of British Methodism and the still greater union of American Methodism, North and South, separated since the Civil War on the question of slavery.

I heard one of the greatest preachers in Canada say, "John Wesley was the greatest man since the days of St. Paul," at which I, as a Methodist, said "Amen." A well-known Scotch Presbyterian, a Prime Minister of England, the late Ramsay MacDonald, said at a recent anniversary of John Wesley's birth, to 10,000 people in Albert Hall, London: "No single figure in human history influenced so many minds and no single voice touched so many hearts as did that of John Wesley." Leckie, the Irish historian, gives John Wesley credit for the political and industrial and social as well as the religious awakening which shook England and afterward flowered in America in 1776 in the Declaration of Independence. (If the like of me said that, some Americans would call me fool and bigot.)

John Wesley was a man of many and varied talents and qualities of mind and heart. He ran the gamut of social problems, such as war and divorce and slavery and housing of the poor, and the liquor problem (Wesley was a total abstainer at a time when most of the clergy indulged). He wrote treatises on medicine and music, on language and literature. He wrote and spoke in five different languages.

Buckle, in his "History of Civilization," asserts that "Wesley was the first ecclesiastical statesman of history." To say that John Wesley was a great man is to say but half the truth. He was great in an age of greatness—a giant among giants such as Chatham and Pitt and Fox and Burke and other intellectual giants of his day.

In paying a grateful tribute to this man of many parts, Lord Macaulay writes: "Wesley was the instrument of a most remarkable moral revolution—a man of great intellect whose logical acuteness might have rendered him eminent in literature—whose genius for government was not inferior to that of Richelieu—who defied all his powers in defiance of abuse and derision to what he sincerely considered the highest good of his fellow-men." Such I take it, is the verdict of humanity. When earth's greatest heroes are buried in oblivion—when the names of Alexander and Caesar and Napoleon (to say nothing of lesser lights—Stalin, Hitler, Mussolini—men of the mere moment) are forgotten—when only the ashes of their lives remain to remind us that they once did live on the earth—the name of John Wesley will shine with a lustre that eternity cannot efface, and the results of his life work be treasured for ever and ever in accord with Divine Revelation. "They that turn many to Righteousness shall shine as the stars for evermore."
