Lyons—Stevenson

Grace United Church, Brampton, was the scene of an interesting wedding on Tuesday, May 24th, when Sara Evelyn, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Lyons, became the bride of Dr. John Clare Stevenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stevenson, Ingleton. Rev. C. E. Craig was the officiating clergyman, and Miss Jennie Milner presided at the organ. The church was decorated with palms, ferns and pink snapdragons. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charmingly gowned in a chiffon over taffeta with light fitting jacket, the long sleeves fitted at the shoulder and with shirred cuffs. Matching Queen Ann hat and shoulder bouquet of Better-Limes roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Ellinor Lyons, Toronto, was gowned in mauve marquisette over taffeta and trimmed with violet velvet bows and girle. Her accessories were violet and she carried a shower bouquet of Permet roses. Mr. William Blackall, Toronto, assisted as groomsmen. The ushers were Mr. Neil Little and Mr. Hugo Lyons. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride. The decorations were French lilacs and tulips. Mrs. Lyons received the guests wearing a printed tea-rose chiffon, with navy accessories, and a corsage of Butterfly roses. Mrs. Stevenson, mother of the groom received, gowned in delphinium blue shege with black accessories. Her corsage was of Sweetheart roses and baby breath. Among the guests was the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Jas. Lyons, who recently celebrated her eighty-ninth birthday. Other guests were present from Hagersville, Barrie, Toronto, Guelph, Georgetown, and the surrounding district. Among the congratulations was a telegram from Miss Betty Lyons, the bride's cousin, who is spending the year in Birmingham, England. Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson left for an extended motor trip through the eastern provinces and States. For travelling the bride chose a grey dress, rose flannel coat and hat with grey accessories. On their return they will reside at 11 Frederick St., Brampton.

Queen Anne Granted an Early Typewriter Patent

The first patent for a typewriter was granted by Queen Anne. That was in 1714, but the patentee, Henry Mill of the New River company, never went into production, says a writer in London Tit-Bits Magazine. It was William Austin Burt, of the United States, who built the first typographer—the ancestor of the machine. That was in 1829. His original machine was lost in a fire in 1836, and no record of its appearance survives.

Since that date typewriters of all sorts and sizes have been built. Most of the earlier models were large and heavy, but they did their job pretty efficiently to judge by a speed contest held in 1888, at which one competitor typed 150 words a minute, while another typed 125 blingfolded.

One early model had keys like those on a piano, another had its frame inlaid with mother-of-pearl. To prevent the letters jamming, one ingenious machine had half the letters in front and half behind the paper. Visible typewriting was not at all popular at first, people being worried by the sight of the keys flipping to and fro as they hit the paper. The silent machine was not thought of in the early days—as far as you could see a machine you could also hear it.

Trees Make Best Growth

During Spring, Summer

We all notice the sprouting of new leaves and twigs, but very few people know just how trees do grow.

The general idea is that trees grow steadily from spring on into the autumn, but experiments show that 90 per cent of the growth is accomplished in spring and early summer.

A delicate instrument called the dendrograph, rather like those revolving charts which record the ups and downs of the barometer from hour to hour, shows that the trunk of a tree swells at night and shrinks in the daytime, according to a writer in Pearson's London Weekly.

During the day, when the leafy branches are exposed to sunshine and warm currents of air, the watery sap evaporates rapidly from the leaves. The roots cannot draw up water from the soil fast enough to make the loss good and this causes the trunk to shrink. But at night, when it is cooler, the water-supply functions again and the elastic wood expands.

The daily changes in the diameter of the trunk vary from about one-one thousand to two hundred fiftieth to about one-two hundredth, but on cool or wet days the trunk is that much broader than it is when the day is hot and dry.

Doctor—"I don't like to mention it, but that cheque you gave me has come back."
Patient—"Well, that sure is funny, doc, so did my lumbago."

Feast Introductions Old

After we have shared a meal with someone, we feel much better acquainted, don't we? The custom of introducing strangers to one another at a feast dates from the time of the earliest men of whom we have any record. When a tribesman brought home a bride from a neighboring tribe, it was natural that his friends should look upon the stranger with suspicion. She might be possessed of evil powers. She might be the cause of calamity among them. So, in order to make her one of themselves, a feast was prepared. Meat was roasted upon a great fire, and the newcomer shared the food with her husband's people. Then the captive woman was considered a member of the tribe, and she was no longer feared by those among whom she had been brought to live.

Basques Solved Caste Question

The Basques are one of the oldest peoples in Europe and have lived in their mountain home in northern Spain and southwestern France from pre-Aryan times, and their language, peculiar to itself, is said to be older than any Aryan tongue. They early solved the question of caste by declaring every Basque a noble, and, although they acknowledged the king of Spain as their ruler, they regarded him only as an equal. Before they would acknowledge him it was necessary for him to come into their country and swear under their sacred oak tree to abide by their ancient rights, or "fueros." Even then they gave him no title. Their king might be the Holy Roman Emperor, but to them he was just plain "senor."

Flying Lizards in Malaya

Flying lizards are found in Malaya. The wings of these creatures consist of the outward extension of the ribs covered with skin. When at rest they are able to bring the skin-covered ribs to their side, but extend them when they leap from one perch to another. These wings would be more correctly described as gliders, for they spread out almost like the wings of a small airplane, supporting the lizard as it travels through the air.

Oracle Found by Goat-Herder

The site of the oracle at Delphi, Greece, was discovered, legend says, by a goatherd who found his herd crying and prancing wildly about a chasm from which issued a stream of intoxicating air. The priestess, who made the prophecies of the oracle used to sit over this but either the chasm itself was legendary or it has disappeared in modern times.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
PROPER EXPOSURE

Brilliantly lighted beach subjects, with no harsh shadows, take less exposure. For this, 1/25 at f.16 (or the large lens opening of a box camera). If subject faces sun, or for a "long-shot" beach view, use f.22 or the small lens opening on a box camera.

MANY writers make a great to-do about exposure, so that it seems complicated. As a matter of fact, for most ordinary subjects out of doors, it is simple.

Light in very early morning or late afternoon is quite weak, but about an hour or so after sunrise to about an hour before sunset, it is fairly constant in its intensity. During the middle daylight hours, camera loaded with chrome type or "pan" type film, set your lens and shutter as follows:

BRILLIANT DAY
Average subject, 1/25 second and f.11 lens opening.
Open landscape, 1/25, f.16.
Water or beach scenes, 1/25, f.22.

CLOUDY BRIGHT DAY
Average subject, 1/25, f.8.
Open landscape, 1/25, f.11.
Water or beach scenes, 1/25, f.16.

DULL DAY
Average subject, 1/25, f.8.

Open landscape, 1/25, f.8.
Water or beach scenes, 1/25, f.8.

When you must use a high shutter speed, use a larger lens opening. Remember that 1/25 second at f.11 is the same as 1/50 at f.8, and about the same as 1/100 at f.5.6 or 1/200 at f.4.5.

Follow these exposures this spring and summer, and you won't go wrong. If you use a box camera, take snapshots on bright days only. On a dull day, place the box camera on a firm support and give a very short time exposure (one-half to one second, or about as fast as you can work the shutter when on "Time") using the small lens opening.

With any camera, when you are taking pictures shortly after sunrise or before sunset, you must use a large lens opening, or a slower shutter speed. At such times, light tends to be yellow and the "pan" type film will be best as it is definitely faster in such light.
