THE DOCTOR

If scribe of Heaven duly must record
The ways of man, at bidding of the Lord,
And every-busy angel doth attend
Performances of kindly deeds, my friend,
As, to and fro amidst the wayward throng,
You wend a willing way with glad-some song
Of life and hope from an unfaltering fount,
How often after day that takes no count
Of hours, nor labor unions vaunted right,
In storm of winter or the sultry night
When others, undisturbed, claim sleep
and rest,
"Coming!" you answer to the one oppressed,
Yours is the nectar of the gods, most rare,
The cup of Heaven seraphs fain might share.
The privilege to serve your fellow man
As only mother or physician can.
In life's great highway, where the crossroads meet,
Guarding the sacred portals, on sure feet
You stand to give each pilgrim needed care,
When souls come into Here or go to There,
Lost faith must be restored to health renewed,
To resurrect the beautiful and true,
With hope and courage to go on again,
Else all material ministries are vain.
It surely is your selfish care and thought
Which many sufferers to health have brought;
Although not comprehending it, 'tis true
They find again the love of God in you.
—Ethel Stillwell.

EQUAL RIGHTS

About the women smoking
There's been great controversy,
But it all ends in smoke,
Which is perhaps a mercy;
Opinion on the subject
From high authority,
For and against leaves smoking
In the majority.
Now picture a great western ranch,
To which we've availed,
Miles and miles of prairie land
With waving grain fields weighted;
Withdrawing after dinner,
Festive with prairie chicken,
The men light up and puff outside
And watch the mirage quicken;
The women sigh and wrangle
And buzz about the dishes;
The men sink back in sweet content
Smoke-drinks and harvest wishes.
—Florence Gould.

CELEBRATED NINETEETH BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Angus McArthur celebrated her nineteenth birthday at her home, sixth line, Erin township, on Sunday, August 21st, when sixty-three relatives and friends called to extend felicitations and spend the afternoon with her.
Mrs. McArthur was the recipient of many beautiful gifts, flowers and messages of congratulations, including a bouquet of ninety roses from Mrs. E. E. Huntman, of Beausville.
Dinner was served when the table was beautiful with flowers and the birthday cake, which was made by her daughter, Mrs. J. O. Martin, Vine land, was complete with ninety candles.
The gathering joined in community singing; Mr. J. D. McArthur sang, "Happy Birthday dear Auntie"; The program concluding with Mrs. McArthur's favorite hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds."
Friends and relatives were present from Beausville, Vineland, Ouelph, Cresmore, Stayner, Toronto, Acton and Erin.
Despite her declining years, Mrs. McArthur enjoys wonderful health, and is about her home daily, taking an active interest in the household duties, and is blessed with the use of all her faculties.—Advocate.

Father (bending admiringly over baby): "I tell you, he's going to make a great politician."
Mother (surprised and hurt): "Why, how can you say that?"
Father: "Because he can babble so many things that sound wonderful but mean absolutely nothing."

Silversmith Paul Revere Artisan of High Renown

Although examples of silver made by Paul Revere were among the first sought after by collectors, his activities in the American Revolution and his versatility in other fields have somewhat overshadowed his achievements as a silversmith. Much picturesque information was gathered about Patriot Paul following Longfellow's stirring recital of his midnight ride.

In addition to his craft as silversmith, he was one of our first engravers of copperplate prints and almost the first American industrialist in the production of copper and brass, says the American Collector. Born in Boston, 1735, during his eighty-three years of life, his natural facility was so marked that Revere, the silversmith, was sometimes subordinated to his other accomplishments. Yet had he done nothing else but cleve to the trade learned from his Huguenot father, he would still be one of the most important American workers in silver. In 1754, the same year that Chippendale published his book of furniture designs, the elder Revere died and Paul, a journeyman at nineteen, took over the management of this long-established shop. From then until about 1800, when he largely forsook silversmithing for his copper manufacturing enterprises, Paul Revere was an active and prolific silversmith.

From 1774 to 1780 he played his part in the Revolution by acting as courier for Massachusetts, printing paper money for the Continental congress, repairing spiked cannon abandoned by the British and serving as lieutenant colonel of an artillery regiment. Then he returned to his original occupation, expanding it to include operation of what he termed a "hardware shop." In it he sold everything from gold jewelry to spectacles and shoe buckles and, of course, table silver and candlesticks. Much of this stock in trade was undoubtedly the product of his own skill and that of his workmen.

Elephants' Legs Strong; Are Set Perpendicularly

As to the elephant's agility, it is pertinent to read the interesting statement of Zoologist Ernest Protheroe, F. Z. S., concerning the elephant's legs:
"In order to support the enormous weight which rests upon them the legs are very stout and are set perpendicularly, without that bend in the hinder leg which is found in most animals. This pillarlike structure is of infinite use when the animal climbs or descends steep acclivities, which it can perform with marvellous ease. Considering its bulk, the elephant is remarkably active; it can lie down and regain its feet as easily as a dog; it can stand upon its hind feet alone, or erect itself upon its forefeet; and it can even stand upon its head. It cannot trot or gallop, but nevertheless can move along at eight miles an hour if needed. A ditch seven feet wide would prove a complete bar, as the animal's maximum stride is only six and a half feet, and it cannot jump an inch."
The statement about the elephant's pace is probably an understatement, for hunters would have no need to fear an animal whose speed was limited to eight miles an hour. Zoologist G. M. Ververs, superintendent of the London zoo, says: "Both species of elephants are fast movers over a short distance, and a speed of fifteen miles an hour is not uncommonly kept up for a quarter of a mile or so, but whereas the African can keep up a speed of ten miles an hour for several hours on the end, the Indian, being shorter in leg and more cumbersome, cannot maintain a speed of more than six or seven miles an hour."

Rivers Flowing North

The United States Geological Survey bureau says that the Red river of the North, which forms the boundary between Minnesota and North Dakota, flows north for part of its course; the Monongahela flows north from West Virginia to Pennsylvania, where it joins with the Allegheny to form the Ohio river; the Niagara river, connecting Lake Erie and Lake Ontario; the Tennessee river, where it crosses the west end of the state of Tennessee; the Snake river, where it forms the boundary between Oregon and Idaho; John Day, Deschutes and Willamette rivers, tributaries of the Columbia river in Oregon; the Missouri river in the vicinity of Helena, Mont., and a part of the course of the Salmon river in Idaho, all flow north. Others having courses between north and northwest include the San Joaquin and Eel rivers in California, Kootenai river in Idaho, Mouse river in North Dakota, Kentucky and Licking rivers in Kentucky and the West-Kanawha river in Virginia and New Virginia.

CANADA'S HUGE LIQUOR BILL

The provincial governments of Canada, and the federal government, derive from the liquor business a revenue of somewhat surprising proportions. The latest figures, chiefly for the fiscal year 1937, but in the case of the Dominion Government for 1938, show a net income of $26,324,618 for the provinces and $26,066,320 for the federal government, in addition, apparently, to sales tax. There is, then, a governmental revenue from liquor in Canada which exceeds $52,000,000.
This means, of course, that the money spent on it by the consumer (and including these taxes) is infinitely greater. The provincial statistics do not show what the consumer actually pays, as they are partially wholesale and partially retail. It has been estimated from a study of these, however, that liquor was consumed in Ontario in 1937 to the extent of over $61,375,000, and in all Canada to the extent of over $158,825,000. These are indeed impressive figures.
A feature of available statistics is the increase in the drinking of "hard liquors" such as whiskey, which are included under the term "spirits." In Nova Scotia the gallonage of spirits sold has increased in four years from $9,961 to 138,683; in Quebec, from $7,224 to 975,294; in Ontario, from $22,177 to 1,264,471; in Alberta, from $7,500 to 210,000. In British Columbia, where statistics do not include gallonage, the value of spirits sold has increased from $4,470,000 to $6,500,000.
It will be said that much of this increase is due to better times and to the greater influx of tourists. Some of it undoubtedly is. But in Ontario, at any rate, the fact remains that there is an increase in drinking among the regular population, and that the greatly increased consumption of beer has not reduced the consumption of spirits, as some claimed that it would.—Daily Star.

Coldest Spot on Earth

The coldest spot on earth is not at either pole, says John Theaman in Globe magazine. It's a town in Siberia known as Verchojansk; here the temperature often falls as low as 80 below zero, and has gone as low as 95.5. The natives of this town live in crude wooden huts, with windows of thin ice cemented in place by pouring on water which freezes quickly around the edges. Walking in such cold air causes the breath to freeze, falling to the ground in a white powder.
