PLAYING THE GAME

Whatever the game and whatever the odds,
The winning is all up to you;
For it isn't the score, and it isn't the prize.

The best you can do may not be quite enough
To defeat your opponent to-day;
But you never can lose, and you never can fail.

And the greatest reward that your efforts can bring
Is the fact that you stood to the test;
That you played a clean game, and you fought a good fight.

THINGS WORK OUT

Because it rains when we wish it wouldn't,
Because men do what they often shouldn't,
Because crops fail, and plans go wrong—
Some of us grumble the whole day long.

GEMS FROM LIFE'S SCRAP BOOK

"Usefulness"
"Think that day lost, whose low descending sun views from thy hand no worthy action done."—Anon.

"JESS"

"That 'Jess' of mine," proudly declared John Coverdale of Kirkwall, Ontario, "is the friendliest horse in the country. She whinnies good-morning to me when I go into the stable, she whinnies a greeting to folks in cars or wagons going along the road, and when my wife calls me from the field to dinner, she answers for me every time.

"Mrs. Toots—"At 4 o'clock."
Suspicious Wife—"Let me see, that letter you've just opened. I can see from the handwriting it is from a woman and you turned pale when you read it."

BASE YOUR BUDGET ON YEARLY INCOME

Budgeting Means Systematic Spending—Learn to Think in Values

Budgeting is systematic spending or thinking in terms of values. The yearly income sets the tempo for the year's expenditures. In planning the budget, this annual sum should be distributed proportionally into months and then into weeks.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To save a lot of hard scrubbing when a man's shirt cuffs get very soiled, try dipping them in made starch before soaking the shirt. The dirt comes out quite easily after this treatment and the cuffs aren't weakened by constant scrubbing.

Coffee stains require boiling water poured through them, also at once—so do fruit stains.
Cocoas stains like to be washed in cold water first and then boiling water poured through them.

PREDICT HEAVY TRAFFIC TO NEW YORK FAIR
That 15,000,000 out-of-town visitors will attend the World's Fair in New York during 1939 is an estimate which has been submitted to the Canadian National Railways over which system many travellers from Canada will find their way to the great exposition.

It was Rochefoucauld who said, "Small minds are the first to condemn large ideas."

The Welcoming Light

TILDA MAY flipped the dishcloth on to its place on the towel rack and turned to survey the "lawdry little figure on the chair near the door.

She managed to veil the hostility in her eyes, and she bit her tongue to keep it from saying, "So you're in again." Instead she said, "I suppose you're hungry."

"I haven't eaten anything since early this morning," she admitted. Tilda May silently put the coffee pot on the stove, sliced cold lamb and deftly set bread and butter, marmalade and a dish of preserved peaches in a tempting array on the table, wondering all the while what this daughter of Tom's had on her mind now.

When she married Tom Taylor she had said to this daughter of his, "Remember, Beverly, there will always be a welcoming light in the window for you." Beverly, it seemed, had always remembered when she needed something.

She had been at a stage school then, a pretty, flighty, thought-she-knew-it-all slip of a girl of sixteen. That was eight years ago. Time and again she had come to her stepmother for money. Large sums of it. Again and again Tilda May had painstakingly saved money out of her budget for a vacation, for a new automobile, for a dress, only to have it wormed away from her by an appeal from Beverly.

A year later Beverly had returned, a deserted wife, and laid an infant daughter in Tilda May's horrified arms at just about the time they were ready to buy another bungalow.

And here she was again. Tilda May watched her out of the corner of a wary eye. She ate like a hungry little animal. She looked ill, in spite of the superfluous coat of rouge on her face, and in spite of herself, her stepmother's heart warmed towards her. After all, she was Tom's, and the welcoming light was still shining in the window for her.

"You quite well, Beverly?" she asked, as she sat down opposite the girl.

Beverly shook her head. "That's what I came about, Tilda," she said. "I got a burn lung. The doctor says I got to go away. He gives me less'n six months unless I go to Denver."

Tilda May's heart sank. Denver! All the money she and Tom had raked together for a much-needed trip to California would have to go to Beverly now, for doctors, and a trip to Denver.

"She shan't have it!" her heart rebelled. "You deserve a vacation. You worked hard for that money. What good is she? What's she done for you? For her father? For her baby?"

"Tilda," the girl's tired voice smote her. "I'm scared to die." "You ain't going to die, Beverly," the older woman soothed her. "I'll see that you have the money in the morning."

Beverly hung her head. "Can I see my baby?" she asked. Tilda May led the way to the bedroom where the mite lay asleep in her crib, a charming, rosy bit of humanity, one chubby hand tucked under her cheek, the other clutching a shabby rag doll.

"There, there," she soothed. "You go to Denver, and get well. Then you'd best come and live here with your father and me."

Tom had grudgingly given up his trip. "You've had nothin' since we was married," he complained, "nothin' but Beverly and her troubles." "I haven't got a burn lung," she interposed, valiantly.

And when the telegram came three months later, she was glad she had been good to Beverly. Beverly had lost her fight. She had died in Denver.

"Poor little Beverly," said Tilda May, wiping away a tear. "She was a drag on you," put in Tom Taylor, averting his eyes. "And her kid'll be another drag."

"No, she won't, Tom," she defended her, staunchly. "She'll have her chance. I didn't have Beverly long enough. No mother for years! What chance had Beverly? Children need homes and parents. Mothers that love them, and understand. Fathers that work to keep the home intact. If God will only let me live, this child shall have Beverly's chance, Tom."

"Guess you're right, Tilda," said Tom. And the welcoming light set in the window for Beverly shone bravely out into the night, as if to tell Beverly that all was well.
